22 Years ago I was invited through a friend of the family to see a underground home. Not knowing until years later it was in preparation for a perceived future event. I can go into details that will blow the mind of who have never seen a huge underground Town. (self.conspiracy)
submitted 5 days ago by i_reddit_for_lulz

I will not speak on who owns the home I was in and the other homes that were on the same slab.

Sounds like some places I visited with my friends in Mid-Western Kansas. We rode our dirtbikes all over and came to a couple restricted areas that still had guards. Middle of nowhere kind of places.

Care to explain more? Was it just a fenced in area or was there some sort of structure? I've been to kansas and on I-80 all you can see is cornfields.

There are a lot of underground missile silo's in Kansas (hence middle of nowhere / all you really can see are fields haha). Most of them are not in use anymore or abandoned, but some were sold to people. I've heard of people making awesome homes/shelters out of them.

The Ozarks are Eastern Missouri. The middle of Kansas is hundreds of miles west.

Not a early prep for that specifically, but they test the population all the time with fake scares and so forth.

They scare you here, so you can get the vaccine there. They scare you there so you'll move here. Some of it is real, but most of it is not. And there is absolutely no way for you to know, unless you know what the tells are.

I'm pretty much unplugged from most of the happening in the world on a daily basis (radio/tv etc...) I'm on the internet of course all the time like most of us but I'm very selective on what I view.

The populace has been controlled for a very long time and as such, if there is any downtown where lawlessness occurs, you best to believe to watch out for 'people'. They will act in ways that seem like their acting out movie characters than how humans should act.

A few days ago I posted about secrets from my youth. This secret, which allowed me to see a underground town and secret technologies. This

What is your definition of a "slab" as you're using it in this story?

permalink parent

[\[-\] i_reddit_for_lulz](#) [\[S\]](#) 0 points 5 days ago

What is your definition of a "slab" as you're using it in this story?

I'm primarily using the term 'slab' because this is what they used to describe the town area and what the town area sits on. Each town area was their own slab.

This is taken from the fact they the cave area was open and huge (maybe the size of Chicago? New York?) and they divided it up and floored it off.

When they used it, it seems like that was the standard lingo. So any here who know of these things, or those who have worked in these will know that 'I know'.

Uh...if you said earlier above that a place like Reddit likely has a spook hanging around looking for clues as to who "knows" things they shouldn't...then why on Earth would you give a descriptive term that might cause one of these spooks to tag you and say "I think we found one."?

I mean you're using the term "slab". You keep saying that word. Isn't that somewhat of a recognizable name that might identify you as someone who "knows" to anyone who might be looking to shut down anyone who might know information?

Just wondering.

Yep, you are correct. But they would also find out that I don't know anything that could truly disrupt/harm their project.

At worse I will receive a phone call. Which if happens, no biggie, but at least I did my part.

If I was my father, or his friend, then I would be obfuscating quite a bit. But since I'm not, there's nothing I've divulged thus far that brings me worry.

So the area went from 3X6 football fields to the size of Chicago/New York...

3 football fields long, 6 football fields wide, was the size of the slab.

The whole opening was divided up into approximately 10 slabs.

This I will assume when taken into that is probably the size of Chicago/New York. I'll be more specific, the size of Downtown Chicago including west loop, and the size of New York, New York. Not including the other islands.

We're on top of a honeycomb earth, not a hollow earth. Apparently there are many massive caverns the size of Texas, but these are at a minimum 20 miles under the surface.

This hideout doesn't surprise me in the least. Would it surprise you to find out that the space already existed and they just had to do some slight modifications (maybe none at all to the walls) before building homes down there?

Nope not at all. My father told me stories when I was younger about the Natives who told them WHERE TO FIND CERTAIN OPENINGS!!!!

So the american natives knew of many of these. He stated that some of the natives said their ancestors went down into some of these tunnel to live out their days.

I hope you are still answering questions!

I am an electrician with interests in botany and am curious about the lighting systems which nourished the farms in particular, and the "outdoor" lighting systems in general.

What type of lighting is it? Incandescent, fluorescent, LED, or something more advanced that would be unknown to me?

Is the lighting system attached to a framework that extends up from the slab, hanging from the ceiling of the cavern, or some other support system I'm not conceiving of?

How high above the slab was the lighting situated? Was the distance from light systems to the slab different between farm areas and residential areas? Was the same type of lighting used in different areas?

Are the food crops grown also odd colors, like the trees?

You say, "no one was there". Are those farms and livestock areas automated, or were you referring solely to the residences as being devoid of other people?

Are the crops grown in soil, hydroponic setups, etc.?

Is there anything else you wish to elaborate on about the farm or lighting systems that you thought was fascinating?

You say the event around 2020 will change the world in hours or minutes, but suggest the elite will have plenty of time to get situated underground. I perceive this in two different ways:

1. A cosmological event is on it's way to us that the elite are aware of and are confident of when it will arrive. (Planet of The Crossing?)

2. The event will be catalyzed by the elite themselves.

Am I in the ballpark on one of these assumptions? If not, can you elaborate any more on your 2020 statements?

I am greatly enjoying your thread; thank you very much for your time and your patience with us.

[\[-\] i_reddit_for_lulz](#) [\[S\]](#) 10 points 4 days ago

What type of lighting is it? Incandescent, fluorescent, LED, or something more advanced that would be unknown to me?

In 1994, it seemed to be Fluorescent. And it DID NOT go all the way up to the ceiling because you couldn't see up there at all. There was lighting on the streets and walkways like standard street post. Now even though it look like Fluorescent, could it have been more advanced? Of course.

Is the lighting system attached to a framework that extends up from the slab, hanging from the ceiling of the cavern, or some other support system I'm not conceiving of?

Yes

How high above the slab was the lighting situated? Was the distance from light systems to the slab different between farm areas and residential areas? Was the same type of lighting used in different areas?

Yes, the lighting for the farms was different. It was much brighter. It looked more like LEDs, but really bright.

Are the food crops grown also odd colors, like the trees?

Yes, all the vegetation was a greenish/bluish in color. Most were more to the bluish side than green.

You say, "no one was there". Are those farms and livestock areas automated, or were you referring solely to the residences as being devoid of other people?

I was mainly speaking of the residences. But I didn't see many people for farms/livestock of that scale. The farms seemed to be totally automated. Was the livestock automated? I would say at least partially. A light would go off, a gate would open and they would all rush into the next pen.

Are the crops grown in soil, hydroponic setups, etc.?

Wasn't close enough to it to see.

Is there anything else you wish to elaborate on about the farm or lighting systems that you thought was fascinating?

The lighting felt a bit uncomfortable outside the house, in a way that you knew you were feeling something not natural. I could only imagine how people would be 100+ years under those lights.

I will say it was strange on how quiet the animals were. I mean really quiet. The place over all with all the machinery I could see, all the homes... it was just really quiet.

You say the event around 2020 will change the world in hours or minutes

Not exactly, around 2020 an event will happen that will change the way we live. In my research this doesn't seem to be the event that will change our lives in minutes or hours. I don't see that coming until a bit later.

A cosmological event is on it's way to us that the elite are aware of and are confident of when it will arrive. (Planet of The Crossing?) The event will be catalyzed by the elite themselves. Am I in the ballpark on one of these assumptions? If not, can you elaborate any more on your 2020 statements? I am greatly enjoying your thread; thank you very much for your time and your patience with us.

You are in the ballpark of my research.

Just let me say, up until a event that cosmological, everything that you see go on, on a major scale no matter the cost of human life WAS PLANNED OUT.

Also why are most people so surprised about this kind of thing, there are literally thousands of underground cities/facilities all over the planet ! Most of these things are build for ELEs.

What is the point of this vague post ?

It's not vague. Maybe you want more information, but it is not vague. What details you want? Actual names? Actual locations? That's just not going to happen.

Honestly why share (on reddit non the less) this if you are certain it will harm others involved in this ?!

It won't harm anyone. As mentioned, at most a phone call. How do I know this? Because I know so I'm not worried about anything more. Why? Because specifics weren't said and it's vague enough.

Even with little info on this and being "long" time ago, they know exactly who you are and what you are talking about...

I'm sure some spies here probably do, but once they look up who I am, my father, then look at what I posted. Again, at most a phone call.

Also why are most people so surprised about this kind of thing, there are literally thousands of underground cities/facilities all over the planet ! Most of these things are build for ELEs.

I agree, they shouldn't be especially with youtube videos showing huge tunnel boring machines etc.

Specific details (names and location) that you are leaving out and with other hints your are saying it actually would not be that difficult to find out, specially if you know what you are doing.

What i'm saying is i understand what you are talking about but what i don't get is why share this... is it just pure curiosity to see what people here would say about this ?

I run my own personal experiments to see how the populace reacts to certain stimuli. This time it is information about what I've seen. To gauge responses and general curiosity. This, I put in my research.

Why? Just purely for the love of curiosity, for knowing. And maybe, just maybe it may cause a chain of events.

This chain of events is what I'm looking for. Rather it be from me, or from a person on the other side of the planet.

This life changing event in 2020, what countries do you think will be hit worst?

America, it is already starting to affect parts of Europe now. Most of the world has always been the half empty. Whereas America has been half full if you get the analogy. America will see how it feels to not be half empty.... but actually empty.

It's in 4 years, realistically what kind of event could happen? All out war? A super plague? Nuclear warfare?

Less than 4, actually 3 years 3 months. But the exact as if it will be plague, war, etc., are not 100% for certain because that depends on many factors. The climate factor is a bit down the road so at least you can count that one out for a while.

Is there anymore information you can give us OP?

If someone were to say to me, out of all that I know or have experienced, in my opinion what should man be more concerned with?

I would say, man needs to find a way back to what it means to actually live life. Not spend life actually working for a machine. Man needs to recapture the spirit of adventure, and this adventure has nothing to do with WAR. Man needs to understand and internalize the will to advance the internal self, not for more stuff, not for war, but because he wants to become closer to the universe itself.

Can we have tech, yes and of course. Make a hard life easier. But we shouldn't allow it to define us.

Also, we all can agree you shouldn't kill, steal, or destroy someone else property. But other than that no one should be telling you how to live your life. When man also understands this, he will walk and act in a way in which only freemen behave.

Well-said.

Okay, so this event in 2020. Do you know if it will be caused by humans themselves? i.e. some cabal deciding they are going to destroy half the population so they somehow kill off a shit ton of people through continued war or a bomb or whatever? or will it be some sort of "natural event" instead like a meteor hitting planet Earth or an Earth quake that erupts and kills half of America or something?

Geological, artificial, manipulated, or natural?

Is it possible they'd activate the super volcano under Yellowstone?

Can any volcano be theoretically activated yes. But is this likely directly due to them hitting a button per say, no.

But it could happen from the fracking, and over drilling that is going on in America. This just by default may cause several massive earthquakes which in turn, could activate and start the ball rolling for a eruption.

Not only myself, but even if I divulged everything the names I think would cause the most problem.

But obviously my father, his friend and their family's.

There is a reason why, with all the governments around the world, and with all those in high science jobs doing unethical things, YOU RARELY hear a peep. Rarely see anyone coming forward 'exposing' anything.

Secrecy is real, and it will get you killed.

Just think about it, when I seen the town in 1994 it was totally constructed and operational. Think of how long it probably took for them to dig down there and dig it out, bring in materials etc.

I estimate it was actually constructed about 20 years before that. So now we are at about 1974.

Every major forum has some type of spy on it. These spies aren't even necessarily employed as such. They are bound by secrecy, they see something they know should be kept secret. They call their superior, it's escalated, that person's information is pulled (yes without a subpoena or even close to it), and then depended upon what they divulged a phone call would occur, a visit, or a disappearance.

Majority of the time a phone call is more than enough.

Some would think, maybe a life changing event in my life or just something of magnitude.

To be honest, not a major reason at all. A minor reason to see what happens based on me saying this research wise. That is it. I already knew some would call B.S., and others will begin other plans.

Similar to the butterfly effect, but in a human sense. This is not the first time I've mentioned certain things in a public way. Just first time on Reddit.

Reminds me of the caves outside Joliet, Illinois. I don't remember much, but some friends and I were fishing when we were kids. We started walking back to a friend's house and found a big hatch with an Army Corps of Engineers seal on it. It looked outrageously old and we were kids. We went and got flashlights and opened the hatch. We climbed down the ladder and ended up in a pitch black tunnel. We made it about 20 feet before lights came on and two soldiers came running at us screaming for us to hit the floor. They asked a million questions (mostly about who we were, where we came from, how we got in, who our parents were, where we went to school, where we'd been in the "complex," and what we'd seen). They marched us out, single file, surrounded by at least a dozen soldiers. I couldn't see anything because the soldiers were surrounding us, but one tunnel we passed was lit brightly and I could see houses in the background like it opened up and there were houses underground. The tunnels actually looked like the hallways you see in sci-fi shows about bunkers... almost exactly like the hallways of Cheyenne Mountain in Stargate SG-1. Anyway... We went up a few dozen flights of stairs followed by a ladder and ended up in the woods. The soldiers marched us all over in various directions for about half an hour and then left us down by the river. The next time we were out that way, the hatch was gone, but it was obvious that it had been purposely removed because it was cleared out a little and there were some smaller trees that appeared to be freshly planted. Until I read this story, I'd forgotten all about my own story. Weird how my mind just completely repressed this for 30+ years.

permalink embed

Was the entrance at a park in Joliet? I remember finding a mysterious set of pitch black tunnels at a park in Joliet and don't remember the name. I was fascinated. We came back a few weeks later with flashlights to really explore it, but the entrance was filled in with cement. My memory is hazy and I've tried to Google it without luck. Can't even remember which park it was in. I think the entrance was kind of in an off the beaten path area and somewhat concealed by trees, but I think it was an archway opening on a small room, with dark hallways going off in different directions. All plain cement from what I can remember. I would really like to find out more about it.

permalink embed parent

[-] Myzyri 5 points 4 days ago

I'm not really sure if it was in Joliet. I really don't think it was. I was only about 8 at the time. 10 at the most. I didn't live down there, but we'd visit my mom's friends. All I remember is that we were fishing on a big river. After looking at a map just now, it would probably have been the west side of the Des Plaines river. We were fishing under a bridge. When we left, we went north up the hill of the riverbank and into a forest. From there, I don't know what direction we went, but the hatch was in the forest and not very far from the tree line.

Again, I was a kid, so I could be completely wrong on where I was, but I remember when going to my mom's friend's place, we'd go over a river (I assume Des Plaines since all the signs around it were for Joliet) and I knew we were only 10 minutes away from being there. So, we could have been in Crest Hill, Joliet, Channahon, or somewhere else pretty close.

In the end, it wasn't in a park. Just a cement square in the forest with a rusty round hatch door on the top. And now my memory is fucking with me. I originally (hours ago) remember the Army Corps badge being on the hatch door. Now I remember seeing it more as a small medallion inset into the cement next to the hatch door. Am I starting to remember more clearly or is my memory just a lump of Swiss cheese filling in holes to make sense of this?

No. Nothing like that. I wouldn't think they'd do anything like that only because we were kids under 10, we didn't really see anything, and if we did, no one would ever have believed us. If I went to my mother in the early 80's and said I saw houses and soldiers underground while I was supposed to be fishing, she would have slapped the shit out of me and told to stop lying. Had we been older, I bet it would have been a different story.

Who gives a fuck about "most"? I know enough and have researched enough about black projects and what exists (and have experienced enough directly in my own life), etc to 100% know that there is a LOT of shit we aren't told about but that is still very much real and exists.

So by all means. Please. Talk about some of the tech your father used to let you see. I for one would like to know about it. Who cares about the naysaying trolls that would come on here and say "I call bullshit!". Fuck them. Ignore those and move on. / wouldn't assume you're lying.

Okay, a block of some smashable, squeezeable soft machine.

My father brings in a block, some what translucent. He puts a plate at the end of the table and says this block no matter what you do will keep moving to the plate.

Okay... so the block, slowly moves (no wheels, no legs) to this plate. I smash it completely flat (it was soft), and it keeps moving. I pick it up and roll it into a ball and then smash it some more. put it back on the table, it formed a block, and kept moving.

From the consumer tech perspective there is absolutely no tech that a consumer can use to hide themselves. The question becomes, more less how much of a threat you are. And when I say threat, not only state level, but world level.

So TOR, VPNs etc., are actually great on the personal level. Yes the FBI might not be able to find you behind a VPN, but if you are a high enough threat and you were at your home, behind 10 VPNS (exaggerating for effect) and TOR, YOU WILL BE FOUND IN AN INSTANT.

I know the above for a fact.

When you held it in your hand, did you feel any pull or agitation in the translucent block moving toward the plate? Could you feel it pulling out of your hand, so to speak, or was the movement so slow that you never felt it pulling/moving toward the plate when you held it?

Do you know or did your father ever say what the mechanism was that caused it to move toward the plate?

And when you say "plate"...do you mean like...a dinner plate?

Wouldn't doubt that for a moment. If TPTB want you found...you're getting found.

This, in part, is why I absolutely know that someone like Edward Snowden is a 100% limited hangout cointelpro operation through and through. If TPTB wanted that dude dead, that motherfucker would be dead.

"Oh no! But he has immunity in another country!" Pssh. Gtfo w/that. The only real and true whistleblower in all this has been rotting in prison and has the last name of Manning.

Snowboy meanwhile gets articles and MSM time dedicated to him left and right...AND a fucking movie made about him? Yeah. Cointelpro fakery for the masses is what he is.

Anyway. Sorry. That was just a random interjection. Moving on in what you're saying.

Yep. Don't doubt any of this for a moment.

We human beings on planet Earth are minnows living in a tiny, very tightly monitored fish bowl. Meanwhile, we've been convinced from birth by the powers who monitor that tiny fish bowl that we are in fact "powerful and freeee! and we can do whatever we want!"

Yeah. Right.

None of this is to say that we humans don't have actual power. We do, in fact. However, we have to develop it and exercise it in order for that internal power we have within us to actually manifest.

and most of us are simply asleep...and have been made into unthinking drones.

TPTB do a hella good job of making sure and keeping us ignorant of the ability and potential we have/can have within us.

Will you go into some general background information about the builders or people who own it?

Builders are top clearance holder companies/individuals.

I mean is this a community of people who work for the government or military or some related industry?

The main areas you'll find are military controlled or influenced, very few are just by rich philanthropist.

Do you think they had actual knowledge of future events, like 'from being on the inside'?

Yes... WHY? Because they caused or help cause, or help further the continuing of causing said destruction.

Was this anywhere near the Ozarks?

You said it, not me.

Why were you or your family invited?

I'm a nobody. But I'm the son of a man who has a few close friends whose families are considered powerful or they are very powerful/influential/very rich themselves. My father was helping his friend with something. What exactly? Don't care or want to know.

"On the same slab", what does that mean?

Think of a slab as a poured (concrete or something like it) area where towns are placed on.

You mean underground clearing with cement floor?

Yes, or at least cement like.

We just drove in.

It was literally in the middle of no where. Even though I didn't see anyone, I am sure if you were to drive close to there YOU would be stopped and asked to vacant the area.

So to answer, no direct security that I could remember.

When it came to the entrance, it was huge, like 15 story building huge. But it was open. And the door was at least 20 or so feet thick

Also as mentioned, I thought we're going to crash into the side of a hill. LITERALLY.

So if you were to get close enough, even 30-40 yards away, you probably wouldn't see it. I thought we were going to crash until we literally went right through it.

Yeah. I've read all your comments in here so far. Did it LOOK like it was closed off and then...just opened up at the very last moment or something? Was it like an optical illusion or something? or did a trap door open, etc?

Of course. I didn't see him communicate. But obviously they knew it was him and he was allowed to be there. I thought I conveyed this as obvious. Sorry if I didn't.

O_o Jesus. Wat? The entrance was that huge? Was it covered up or hidden? or was it just...out in the frickin' open?

o_O Yes, open. But like I said you could stand 20-30 yards from it and YOU WOULD NOT SEE IT. You would've seen a HILL like I did. They just drove right into it. It was like a projection almost over the door itself.

Yeah. I've read all your comments in here so far. Did it LOOK like it was closed off and then...just opened up at the very last moment or something? Was it like an optical illusion or something? or did a trap door open, etc?

Yes, like a optical illusion or a mirage.

Was it covered over with moss or vines or something? WHY wouldn't you be able to see it from that close?

Nope, not covered. If you paid attention to the surrounds you would see a road with tracks going around the hills, but also going straight into it.

So wait minute. I thought it was just you and your friend that went. It was...four of you that went? You, your friend, your father, and his friend?

It was my father, his friend + some other guy, and me.

Very frickin' interesting.

I wonder if they had some sort of projection technology or something making that happen. You think?

Where? How big? What was the air purification system like? How did they manage waste? Water purification? How could they see outside?

permalink embed

[–] i_reddit_for_lulz [S] 6 points 5 days ago

Where?

I will not be divulging any information on locale. I was 16 at the time and didn't pay a lot of attention to exacts because I didn't even know we were going anywhere even close to that. Just thought it was a quick family getaway. BUT I will say, I have a general idea of where, give or take a few miles distance. I've actually plotted it out on a map on my wall since years ago.

What was the air purification system like?

I have no idea. The slab we were on was approximately 6 football fields wide and 3 long. With the lighting I couldn't see the ceiling if that helps.

How did they manage waste?

Again, not sure, I was 16, I was just in space land literally going nuts on what I was seeing. But everything worked as it would have in any home. LITERALLY noticed no difference when it came to lights, flushing toilets, taking showers etc.

Water purification?

See above

How could they see outside?

They didn't. We traveled at approximately a 20 degree decline for about 10-15 miles.

Was this giant cavity a natural geological feature, or was it deliberately created?

The tunnel system was totally man made. But the town area was huge. We live on the surface of the earth, so we look up at the sky and see layers of clouds until we can't see further.

Much different feeling when inside the earth and looking up. You know a ceiling is up there, but it is so high up you can't see it.

The slabs that made the towns was materials brought in. But the cave it self was a natural opening.

They had the ability to grow their own food (farms), they had live stock that were there and been there for a while because they had to get adjusted over a few generations to be viable over the long term. The farms also were in full operation.

They had over 300 years of water functionality. And over 100 years of food storage. As far as oxygen I know that the entrance can become completely sealed, and they did have some type of man made oxygen apparatus there. But the cave system itself seem to supply the oxygen needed.

That's actually interesting you actually asked this. Based on my research of this, it totally contradicts what I experienced first hand.

It was a very pleasant 60-70 degrees. The slab and above to ceiling (that I couldn't even see) was huge so could they temp control the entire area, maybe. But I didn't notice any type of easily recognizable hvac systems.

Just to add:

The reason I keep calling the area we were in a slab is because that's what they call it and that name stuck.

There were many slabs that had X amount of homes on it.

Outside of the home it was very spacious, wasn't cramped even slightly it was like being anywhere in the U.S. but just dark of course because you were underground.

One thing that was a little strange was that it was like your ears were hearing a "hollowed" out kinda sound. Very strange and it is something you would have to experience.

It wasn't noise, or a sound, kinda like empty/filled air all around you.

Also, most of the homes were empty. They were owned in full. But it wasn't like people went there on family vacations to hang out. We were only there because my dads friend needed him at the time.

Was there light sources under ground that mimiced the sun, to the point that you saw grass or trees? was there soil on the ground, or was it all slick rock like that you'd find in a well worn cave? was the air damp?

were there people walking around when you visited?

did they mention/point out how they were supplying air and water? if something were to happen on the surface, they may not be able to rely on the air supply on the surface, so they'd need to block air flow from the surface to them, and then have some sort of mechanism that would clean their air of any toxins. they could also have large gardens to convert co2 to o2 and other gases.

any kids walking around?

ive heard of large caverns like this being made with blasts from small nuclear devices.

were the walls of the cave slick, almost like they had been melted?

was there hospitals, military/police, court house, bank, grocery store, schools, play grounds, etc?

was this cave system with a slab connected to another cave system, under ground? like a tunnel? so its like, each cavern system is a town, and then you can drive to other towns?

you say you drove with your car down to the town, but, i'd imagine car exhaust would be a BIG problem if many people were driving in to the underground town at one time, like when the world is ending. was there a parking lot area/space for everyones cars, or did they simply park them at their home? like a normal, above ground town?

though underground transportation would have to be heavily reliant on electricity, which was made from a clean source like a geothermal vent, that had a steam engine/steam generator built over it, to provide power to the town. possibly even a mini nuclear reactor, as they've gotten safer and cleaner over the years. or even a few of those extremely hot reactors that are placed inside of space satellites for a constant flow of heat and electricity.

thx again for the info and your replies to other people. i try to take people at their word, especially when it comes to this topic. do you have the feeling that if the world were ending, your dad's friend would be inviting your dad and his family (you) down to the cave system with him?

any response would be great.

Why you asked a bunch of questions! Thank you, I will answer all in order.

They had a central stock where over 100 years of stocked food was located. Plus live-stock, plus farms that were in operation.

So if SHTF, I take it each resident would get a ration.

Was there light sources under ground that minced the sun, to the point that you saw grass or trees? was there soil on the ground, or was it all slick rock like that you'd find in a well worn cave? was the air damp?

There was no grass, there were trees but they had a weird color. Light a greenish/bluish. That could be from being under artificial lighting 24/7. No soil. We walked on cement. The air was dry.

were there people walking around when you visited?

No.

did they mention/point out how they were supplying air and water? if something were to happen on the surface, they may not be able to rely on the air supply on the surface, so they'd need to block air flow from the surface to them, and then have some sort of mechanism that would clean their air of any toxins. they could also have large gardens to convert co2 to o2 and other gases.

When I asked my father about this he stated the oxygen comes from below, not above.

They had over 300 years of stored water. BUT they had access to water in underground systems.

any kids walking around?

No kids

ive heard of large caverns like this being made with blasts from small nuclear devices.

Not sure on others, but this place was a naturally opening.

were the walls of the cave slick, almost like they had been melted?

Nope, normal cave walls in the areas you could get close enough to touch. Some areas were fenced off. But also I didn't explore a lot because I was a guest.

was there hospitals, military/police, court house, bank, grocery store, schools, play grounds, etc?

Nope, none of the above, at least on the slab we were on.

was this cave system with a slab connected to another cave system, under ground? like a tunnel? so its like, each cavern system is a town, and then you can drive to other towns?

Yes, in this cave opening there were a total of 10 slabs, so 10 towns. Not sure exactly how you would get to them but there were around. So literally how you may go to the next town over to visit family, same concept.

you say you drove with your car down to the town, but, i'd imagine car exhaust would be a BIG problem if many people were driving in to the underground town at one time, like when the world is ending. was there a parking lot area/space for everyones cars, or did they simply park them at their home? like a normal, above ground town?

IF needed like we did, one could drive in and down. BUT, before SHTF people would drive to a location, be picked up. And the shuttle would take everyone down before everything was locked down.

though underground transportation would have to be heavily reliant on electricity, which was made from a clean source like a geothermal vent, that had a steam engine/steam generator built over it, to provide power to the town. possibly even a mini nuclear reactor, as they've gotten safer and cleaner over the years. or even a few of those extremely hot reactors that are placed inside of space satellites for a constant flow of heat and electricity.

There was steam coming from vents in the wall throughout the tunnel going down. Also in back of the homes steam was rising also. They did have a rail system that I didn't see in action. But I'm sure other things were there also.

To be quite honest. No, he wouldn't. The way he is, the way the others are...

I would just say, In knowing some who truly hold secrets like this, they are a group of people that I wouldn't want to be around for a long time. As in locked in a underground town type of time.

And your welcome, I thank you for your honest interest.

is there a leadership there? what is there long term planning like? are they planning, if an event were to occur that required they take shelter, to stay under ground for decades? for centuries? because one may be prepared for with enough stores of staples/food/water/medical equipment/etc, while the other would be prepared for differently with farms (hydroponic or aquaponic, as you want to make your farming situation as efficient as possible, both with its usage of water, and its output of crops), which also would mean there'd need to be factories to make parts that fail/break over their normal usage/expected life span. as well as chemistry labs to create the various powders and chemicals needed, such as medicines and cleaning fluids, etc.

I'm sure there would be leadership if SHTF.

Not sure on long term planning. But it is obvious they planned things out far in advance.

They have the ability to stay underground for CENTURIES. Probably till the point they would come out eventually looking something far from us today.

As far as the other comments, with how large it was/is, many people believe that you need huge factories to do this and that. Really you don't. Especially if these factories are running today when everything is fine and you just stock away all that you would ever need period. If you need 100 years worth of parts, well store away 500 years. It's not like it's costing them anything (government wise).

permalink parent

[-] austenten 10 points 5 days ago

No, I would not claim that.

I've been researching these topics for many years, and the time has come to start doing my part to inform others about what I've learned. As always, cross reference claims you see with other sources you dig for.

1. Some - not all - ultra-elite that are perpetuating above top secret and unacknowledged programs are Luciferian worshippers in nature.
2. Because of [1] this negative polarity bias, what they perceive will be evil in nature, similar to the double slit experiment, as in quantum physics studies. (i.e. matter at its most elemental nature that is observed behaves differently than when it is not observed, and what observations can/not be concealed etc.)
3. The ultra-elite DO have access to future event prediction technologies, so they have looked into the future, but those technologies are apparently affected by said double slit quantum effects.
4. Put 1 - 3 together, and you end up with perceived negative world ending events, that might happen to the observer, but not actually occur for the vast majority of the world's population.

There are many possible global catastrophes, giant meteor, coronal ejection from the sun (massive super heated "flame/s" swinging out from our sun hitting the earth, at best frying all electronics, at worst frying everyone on the surface), pole shift leading to global volcanoes and earthquakes and a magnetic shift of the North and South poles... etc etc. Point is, these are all scenarios the ultra elite have witnessed, but as per my points 1 - 4 above, there is ZERO certainty any of these will happen.

This would not surprise me at all.

I want to know 3 things:

What do they have in-case of an event that atmospheric oxygen is depleted below the levels to sustain life/brain function?

What happens when they run out of food/water?

Where do they get their energy? (This has probably advanced massively, but I am still curious on what you have to say)

I wouldn't know the tech of this, but I'm sure there's redundancy.

What happens when they run out of food/water?

They have warehoused 100+ years of food and have livestock plus multiple farms. If in fact they couldn't live on the surface even after 100 years they still would have more than enough food/water for much much longer.

Where do they get their energy? (This has probably advanced massively, but I am still curious on what you have to say)

Great question! Without exact since I've only been once, it would have to a mix match of probably nuclear (nasty but dependable) or thermo (great, but not as dependable).

Some of the questions I'm receiving seem to want me to hint to UFO's or some black op tech. I would say neither in this case.

You know very little then, if there is livestock, they need hardcore ventilation of sometype.

If they are using nuclear fission, they better have sodium covered rods instead of heavy water to use up 95% of the fuel, to avoid buildup of nuclear waste, and there is very little actual food/non-perishables that still cannot last 100+ years.

EDIT: I don't mean your not smart, I mean that there is a great amount of detail you are unaware of, the visual perspective that you give is great though.

But they did have livestock along with large farms that were operational.

I.E. destroying the water, air, food supply. But even if we didn't, climate change would be still happening =>

Predicted not so much, either an orchestrated event, or a plotted celestial one.

This is actually a good thing. We're moving from the worst, most devolved age in our solar system Tha Kali Yuga, to the next, more energetically invigorated age - The Dvapara Yuga.

We don't live in a singular star system as it turns out, but a binary one - the star Sirius A being the sister star to our own Sol/Sun. These two stars revolve around one another in an orbit of about 4.5 million years. During that time, the energetic value of each star, as well as all the planetary bodies attached to and associated with each star, changes with the proximity of each star on one another. It's very similar to what happened when two magnets are in varying proximity to one another. Their energy values change depending upon where they are in relation to one another.

Same with each star and their planets.

We were previously in a time when the two stars were furthest apart from one another. This created the lowest and darkest energy point in each stars' existence. Hence, we were/had been in what's referred to as The Kali Yuga - The Age Of Darkness and Avarice.

The two stars have past their respective aphelion points, however, and are now beginning to "round the corner" so to speak and making their way back around toward one another. This means that, as they're coming closer to one another, their respective energetic values are increasing. This is why we are now entering the next age - The Dwapara Yuga. In this age, the energy value of everyone - human and non-human alike - increases. Human awareness and ability/sensitivity increases in this time, and the human lifespan goes from the 100 year limit as is generally the case now/today, to a 1000 year limit. This Dvapara Yuga, incidentally, also happens to be the age when the Bible took place - the "Jesus time", so to speak. This is why you get so many tales of "miracles" happening during that time and so many lifespans that last literally hundreds of years - Methuselah living to nearly 970 years of age.

There's lots in the bible that is fabricated bullshit. Yes. But there's quite a bit of it that corresponds significantly to historical and scientific data as well. Gotta sift and separate the wheat from the chaff in it, so to speak.

It's said that we've "officially" just entered into the Dvapara Yuga, and this is the reason why we are seeing an influx of savants and geniuses and kids of all kinds that have amazing and impressive abilities that just did not happen decades ago. We've only just entered this new time, however, so the planet and the human species won't really begin to feel the REAL effects of the next age for a few more generations still.

TL;DR: You're pretty much right in what you're saying, bro.

Yes I have. I've been sorta obsessing about this (as you could imagine) since going in one way or another.

First, unless I some how become a billionaire to pay for it all in full myself, I will be on the outside suffering whatever crap is happening just as you will.

Those who are going to Mars and have been (yes, you heard me), are not those who are living underground. The underground people are those who are powerful/rich enough, but not so powerful or rich to go elsewhere.

And these underground towns are all over the U.S. many in the Midwest and up by near the Canadian border going west.

As far as the slab we were on, there were 10 more at that location. Not sure if they were above, or below, or next wall over.

During your research, if you haven't already, look up "Deep Underground Military Bases" or "DUMB's". GUADELLEUPE MTS. - In the 1800's, two trappers reportedly discovered a cave in the Guadalupe Mts., which they followed to a considerable depth. Hiding behind a large outcropping of rock they observed in fascination and horror a procession of beings in dark hooded robes enter a large cavern and began to chant, at which a "crystal like" entity descended from the stalactites above, hovered and in a multi-colored display communicated with the beings in some type of xylophone-like manner, until it once again ascended and was lost among the stalactites above, at which the procession descended DOWNWARD through the passage from which they had emerged. source: SHAVERTRON Magazine

Are these names we have heard such as Rothschild and Kissinger or names we have never heard?

Edit: I tend to think that OP is telling the truth. A friend of mine, whom I trust implicitly, told me that when he worked as a cabbie he once drove a man way out to the middle of nowhere in PA and the man paid him, got out, walked a few steps and disappeared. Most have NEVER heard of whom I'm talking about, so media wouldn't know either.

I would never speak the name my father told me. The names aren't meant to be said publicly in any form. And if someone did, it would be immediately known, flagged, and that person would be gone.

What evidence do you have that people have already been to Mars?

Not direct evidence as in papers or secret tech. I work in a government related field, nor have been in the military.

But,

My father and two of his closet friends are 'those' types that I mentioned above. The one who invited us to the underground town stated that he was pissed that he wouldn't even be close to being considered to be "one of the ones getting off this rock."

When he said this I laughed and said pretty much "what e.t. isn't taking anymore passengers?!" He looked at me with a look that I knew to not bother him at all during the trip.

From my family talks, that lead me in very 'specific' directions since I was privileged to know/over hear certain things, I will say, everything to what is going on in politics, to commerce around the world is REAL. BUT, it is all to keep us tuned in so when the finale happens most won't know what hit em.

It's really simple. The governments of the world, and more so the rest love to say how there's are to many people on the earth etc.. etc..

And they love to say there 7 billions gonna be 8 billion soon this is disastrous! What if there was really closer to 12 Billion. And now there is 7? Or that it was 7 billion maybe 10 years ago, now it's closer to 6?

How would that make you feel?

That was my point. IT's far less than they claim, but their original claim was B.S. also.

Real number is between 4-5.5 billion. Most western countries have far less than they project. Africa has moderate growth even though they are pretty much slaughtered from war, genocide, biological weapons.

Far east asia (China) are starting to dwindle dramatically with their 1 child policies. India is still raising but at a slower pace.

Population reduction is a principal step for making the planet sustainable. Since people will never accept a global population control program, and even if they did you can't really prevent reproduction, other methods must be used to accomplish the same goal. If I had this kind of power I would do exactly as you're describing.

The main questions I ask myself with these so called "reveals" is Why does it happen at all if it's real? We all know they have no moral restraints to kill people. If such program would be real the security behind it would shut these things off before or shortly after it happened and then isolate the event by silencing everybody around it.

And why do the interviewers(on both sides) usually look like crazy psycho cult members. That's the vibe I usually get from a lot of these so called UFO/Alien reveals.

So my trust in these currently available reveals is extremely low.

Why does it happen at all if it's real?

Why does what happen at all? The secrecy? The existence of ETs?

If such program would be real the security behind it would shut these things off before or shortly after it happened and then isolate the event by silencing everybody around it.

Wait a minute...if such a what were real? ET existence? And who would "shut these things off"? The U.S.? The military? Who?

Regardless, A) such a thing as ET existence on and around planet Earth is very much real, and B) they've been around here a looot longer than we human beings have. They created us. So no. We don't really have anywhere near the power to just "shut them down" regardless of what we wanted one way or the other.

I don't know if this is exactly what you're referring to, however, so I may not even be addressing to the specific thing you were.

And why do the interviewers(on both sides) usually look like crazy psycho cult members.

They don't. You're just propagandized and haven't dug deep enough into the subject to understand that many don't look anything like "crazy psycho cult members". All you've done is allowed yourself to be influenced by the cointelpro that TPTB have put forth on the surface level making everyone think of UFO researchers like this rather than this and the people here.

So my trust in these currently available reveals is extremely low.

Of course it is. It's because, again, your understanding is only at the most superficial of surface levels on the subject where tons of cointelpro runs amok. To be sure, tons of cointelpro runs amok at the deep levels too, but there's a lot more reality the deeper you go as well.

I didn't dv you, btw.

If the black project is as real as the guy claims the whole interview would not have happened in the first place or any persons and distribution channels would have been silenced shortly afterwards by any means.

Shouldn't this obvious issue not make you question the whole thing?

You might believe that "they" created us based on some published books and webpages but that only makes it a theory. Fact requires verification which I haven't seen yet, did you?

If the black project is as real as the guy claims the whole interview would not have happened in the first place or any persons and distribution channels would have been silenced shortly afterwards by any means.

What "black project"? What "whole interview" are you talking about?

Shouldn't this obvious issue not make you question the whole thing?

I honestly don't know what you're talking about regarding any "black project" or "interview".

You might believe that "they" created us based on some published books and webpages but that only makes it a theory.

There is no "belief". There is intelligent and critical assessment based upon available data. That's a far different thing altogether from mere "belief".

Fact requires verification which I haven't seen yet, did you?

Nobody's talking about "facts" here. That's the problem. You're looking for nothing but "facts" when the truth is that in this line of inquiry and investigation, you're going to turn up almost nothing if that's the only thing you're looking for. What you have to be looking for aren't necessarily facts as much as evidence. That can present itself in various ways and be rather subtle and not easily discernible - but ultimately very valuable all the same.

If all one is looking for is "hard facts!" then they're going to simply miss the entire boat altogether because the roads which lead to truth in this area of inquiry are very, very gossamer and not easily pinned down.

The interview with the so called Randy Cramer who defines himself as a clone and a space super soldier which is the root of most of the latest stories about human colonies/mars/secret space programs.

Is the context of my post that unclear that this is that hard to comprehend?

My claim is quite simple. If the program exists then it is so top secret that such reveal likes Kramer's would not be possible or radically cleaned up.

If it exists and some people inside want to make people aware of it they would use people which have a certain scientific/public reputation with a certain trust level and not just people which at the most are only known in the UFO fandom with a vibe of a psycho cult which have a "need to believe".

I also can't seriously suspend my disbelief with stuff which comes from Wilcock's ilk about sphere alliance.

If this is still not clear enough I suppose any further communication would be futile because I truly don't know what else to say.

Shouldn't be depressed. Many here want to know, well this is knowing! At least what can be known at this time.

Knowing this is going to happen what are you doing to prepare or spend your time on? Do you have children?

There are always trump cards in play. But will it change the inevitable? That I can't say.

How do I prepare, or spend my time? I prepare based on what I have to do what I feel I need to do if within the normal range of things happen. What do I spend most of my time on? I spend most of my time on task that enrich the spirit.

These types of events are in my Celestial category. There is a celestial event that high up at NASA have been plotting for a while (this is classified).

But of course other celestial events could happen anytime OUT OF NO WHERE, and these I would have no idea of.

The events I speak of are not the sun going spotless but it may have something to do which what comes much later.

lol it's an old movie about this grown man who has lived his entire life in an underground house with his parents who have been convinced (or convinced their son) that the world has ended or there was a huge war or something and it's too dangerous to go up there. However something happens and he has to go up there to get something for his family (it's kind of funny that the door that he enters the real world is actually inside of a porn shop) or something and he meets this bitchy girl and they fall in love, etc. I can't believe there's people who haven't watched this, I used to watch it all the time when I was younger.

City of Ember is a movie about a bunch of people living in a deep underground city for hundreds of years. Really a pretty good movie IMHO. Worth watching. Seems to capture a lot of what you're talking about here.

Okay, the far fetched details.

First, this place you went was so top secret it was only for super VIPs - well beyond several living presidents of the USA. That's pretty gods damned super secret. And YOU and SOME GUY your DAD knows actually went there? Sorry, no. If this place was THAT super secret and off limits to 'normies' like you and me, there's no way you'd have gotten within 50 miles of the entrance. I mean, your dad would have to be a super important dude himself in order to be let in there.

(As an aside I dated the daughter of the head of the national air defense system back when I was in college. Yes, for real. I could name names which no doubt some people out here would pick up on. Was very interesting having conversations with that guy. He couldn't tell us until he got back that he'd been shipped off to 'the sandbox' for three weeks to figure out how to shoot down SCUD missiles. So I know just a little teensy bit about how top secret stuff is handled.)

Driving a gasoline car down in to the cave should have been a no-no. If that was the actual case, you'd have felt a strong breeze while down there from the ventilation system.

20 degrees down for 10-15 miles? No. I seriously doubt that. First, when driving underground, such as in a mine, it's really difficult to tell at what angle you're driving. At 5,000 feet below the surface, the temperature is about 105F and it's humid as fuck. Dry air is highly unlikely without a massively powerful ventilation system. As someone else stated, deeper than this things get stupid hot.

The furthest I've been underground is about 800 feet in a gold mine. It was cold, but the air was certainly not dry. There was water everywhere, and there was a huge ventilation system.

Mars? Wat. I'll go look in to the Marine Captain guy, but I'm doubting that we've got people on Mars. Given the required technology to get there, I'd be astonished. Not saying it's totally impossible, but extremely unlikely.

Look mang, you have to start dropping some verifiable information on this. By now, I'm certain people have traced your IP address and maybe even know who you are. The fact that you seem clueless about this fact (based on one of your answers to someone on this) sprays bullshit everywhere. There is no way you'd have been taken to a place like this without a very clear talking to about secrecy. And I guarantee, given what I know of how our government handles potential breaches of super secret information, you would never, ever come out on to Reddit with information like this if it were actually true. You'd be shut up real fast like.

Yes, my dad is that super important. But not as important as his friend. And as his son, does that make me at least some what important. Yeah I guess you can say that. But not important enough to get my own spot there. So that say enough.

20 degrees down for 10-15 miles? No. I seriously doubt that. First, when driving underground, such as in a mine, it's really difficult to tell at what angle you're driving. As someone else stated, deeper than this things get stupid hot.

I agree. But it was a good 60-70 degrees on the slab. So what can I say about that. Maybe they did have some type of cooling system throughout but I didn't see it.

The furthest I've been underground is about 800 feet in a gold mine. It was cold, but the air was certainly not dry. There was water everywhere, and there was a huge ventilation system.

Okay that was your experience.

But this wasn't a mine. And even though I agree with your experience of going underground, this was no way like that.

Wat. I'll go look in to the Marine Captain guy, but I'm doubting that we've got people on Mars. Given the required technology to get there, I'd be astonished. Not saying it's totally impossible, but extremely unlikely.

Unlikely based on what you think you know. There is much much more that I know even in this area. And what about what I don't know?

The fact that you seem clueless about this fact (based on one of your answers to someone on this) sprays bullshit everywhere.

Clueless?? What??? I said they would probably know who I am, and my father and at most I'll receive a phone call.

You should read all of my post.

you would never, ever come out on to Reddit with information like this if it were actually true. You'd be shut up real fast like.

Why not? Maybe this was just meant to happen. I know one of the Mods in this subreddit report to a certain government entity. And he probably has already probably linked this topic and sent it off.

What's your point? Enjoy it for what it's worth.

Not trying to be disrespectful or to piss you off, but maybe I should ask what your point of all of this is.

My point is to ask you to give us some more concrete detail. Something actually verifiable. If you did that, and some piece of verifiable information went public, then maybe something would change. Maybe just something small, but it could be something.

Talking like you are out here, I'd be worried about a phone call to my father if I were you. 'Just a phone call' isn't how I know things are handled.

And if your dad IS that super important, then why would you jeopardize his goings on by talking about this stuff out here? Again, not being an a-hole; genuinely asking why.

You mentioned that someone said the oxygen came from underground. I'm no dummy, but I can't understand how this is possible. Can you elaborate?

You mention that maybe this was just meant to happen. But to what end? Rile the peoples?

My father is a old man now. He's not worried (We spoke about me saying a few things on here)

As you said, you "want verifiable evidence" and that is what you won't get.

You mentioned that someone said the oxygen came from underground. I'm no dummy, but I can't understand how this is possible. Can you elaborate?

I'm not a engineer and could even only imagine how they built inside the cave itself. Let alone the mirage/illusion door. So, your guess may be as good as mine. But from what I am told that if the oxygen on the earth itself was gone/unusable, they could get what they need from below ground.

You mention that maybe this was just meant to happen. But to what end? Rile the peoples?

Are you saying you're riled?

permalink embed parent

[\[-\] ShitsInPringlesCans](#) 7 points 5 days ago

I live in Marin County, CA.

It's not your old man I'm worrying about. Honestly, it's you. I know that if I was a super super super important dude and some guy went out on the net and told a bunch of people about my secret place, I'd have him disappeared. More importantly, I'd have made sure anyone who knew about my secret place would know they'd be disappeared if they said anything. That's anyone - including sons of important fathers.

So why say all this then if you're not going to give verifiable evidence? I suppose for the lulz, huh?

Yes I'm a bit riled. I know there are underground secret places - for sure. But things of this magnitude, and on a multiple scale (meaning apparently many of them), is pretty egregious. And our statements about things happening around 2020 are bothersome.

So you spoke with your father about you saying things out here. He's obviously in favor of it. Okay, so do him proud and go out with a bang. Drop some real evidence and change the US, or just stop. Without your willingness to be real and verifiable about something like this, your only single motive must be the lulz you get out of leading people on.

permalink embed parent

[\[-\] I_reddit_for_lulz](#) [S] 5 points 5 days ago and go out with a bang. Drop some real evidence and change the US

Hmm.... a bang huh.

I could show a picture of a space craft up close with me next to it and it will not change anything in the U.S. or the world. Some of you may change...., some of you may be in fact happy to see something tangible finally.

But in the grand scheme it does nothing.

What is more tangible, is for your belief to become stronger, for you to walk with certainty in all that you do.

permalink embed parent

[\[-\] Thementalrapist](#) 1 point 5 days ago

Here's where his story falls apart, if events took place that would cause people to move underground it's every man for himself, no one is important anymore, not even the POTUS, if it came down to my families survival I would kill whoever or whatever I had to to make sure they survived, if something like this existed the very people that created it would eat themselves, it's human nature.

You're right to be skeptical.

There are some pretty bigass cave systems, though. My dad said there were enough to stumble upon football-field-sized caves while playing as a kid in the bible-belt area. I'm sure with all of the mountains and the Great Basin in the West, there are tons of bigger formations out there.

My father had sad when I asked him years later (Approx. year 2002), he stated "that it was because of government being unstable and some hinted to climate related catastrophes."

What kind of recreational systems were available?

We stayed for (2) days and I have never been back. When I was there I played basketball. They had a full tennis court, and track. I'm sure in the homes people had whatever they wanted.

Was it like a Fallout Vault?

No, the slab we were in was about 3 football fields long, about 6 football fields wide. The door to enter was completely hidden, more like miraged. YOU WOULD NOT NOTICE from the outside unless you absolutely knew what you were looking for. I thought we were going to crash into the side of a hill. It looked like it did have a huge door that closed but it was open when we came in, and when we eventually departed.

Why are people in Silos fucked but not Slab people?

But the people living in the underground towns were created with government ingenunity and with VERY long term planning in mind.

I don't know specifics on the water system, but I do know it will last well over 300 years. And they have over 100 years of food. This is based on 3 meals a day with at proper nutrition standards. And they can grow their own food, they have live stock etc.

SILo people have none of this. The most high tech silo I've seen was GREAT for a family, living in complete isolation and if the outside would be livable withing a relative short period of time, cool.

Long period of time. Nope. Just not large enough to accommodate the equipment, food, water that is needed for extreme long term isolation.

The Slabs were their own towns, own commodities and if they were actually living in them now, could trade with the above ground people as if they were the local town down the road.

I feel like super duper advance tech not available to the public in the 90's was maybe early to mid 2000's levels, this is totally based on ignorance of course, but still please explain further.

You're looking at things from SCI-FI tv based assumptions (kindly). Most things on the consumer level, there are equivalent things of much better quality if you know where to buy. Things were not old. And remember, it is not liked they are closed off now. They can still bring in anything they want if certain systems need to be upgraded etc.

Since that was 22yrs ago any chance your father's friend died, maybe you should bust a move.

How the heck would a project of such magnitude, involving thousands of people (including low-lever workers with no commitment to secrecy), not be known by everyone? Makes no sense.

Did you here when CERN was built or did you hear about it after it was built?

There are no low-level, non security clearance workers as you put it. Everyone has a certain level security clearance or above PERIOD.

Those here who have been in the military could tell you easily have how works. It's on a as need to know basis.

Secrecy has been going on for a very long time, the system itself is based on secrets, lies, misdirection.

I will say this, that I sense from you that it's not about can secrets be held, BUT more less WHY hasn't anyone said anything, do they care what their doing etc.

Why do I say I sense this, it is because I felt this way myself for a very long time. It was frustrating, and it in fact made me very angry. Because it shows how evil people really are to do certain things to their fellow man.

Just think about how much the MSM lies. They refuse to tell the truth on certain topics purposely. And they do this time and time again. Think all the news anchors that collaborate the lies.

And these people aren't even sworn to secrecy.

A strict military style code of conduct, with heavy penalties. I'd imagine everyone for the most part would understand that it's in everyones favor, for this to remain a secret.
