The first example I'll give to help you see is a news story you already know. I'm not going to attack or defend it, I'm going to use it to explain a secret greater than the politics.

Context is the key that unlocks everything and so I have to first explain the basic history.

The Access Hollywood tape was the biggest scandal of the 2016 election.

Access Hollywood tape

This is NOT what Larry the Cable Guy meant by "Git-R-Done" -- but he damn near broke his opponent's limb in half during an arm wrestling competition.

The video is intense to say the least -- and it went down at the University of Nebraska football game last Saturday in Lincoln. Larry, a huge Huskers fan, and the guy -- an army vet named John -- were in a luxury suite, and we're told John challenged the comedian.

Just watch, it's a very close competition. Until it isn't ... and John's arm breaks.

We're told he had surgery to put a plate in his arm, and he's as okay as he can be today.

Fittingly, he broke his humerus bone. Yes, the funny bone.

It's been reported that John's injury required surgery, but that he is now well on his way to recovery. The vet posted this photo of his black and blue arm post-match, and it isn't pretty

You should not watch this if you get squeamish easily, or if you don't think you could stomach watching a man's arm break in half.

Apparently Larry The Cable Guy is one strong fellow, and he just proved it in one of the most horrifying ways possible: breaking someone's arm.

Fittingly, he broke his humerus bone. Yes, the funny bone.

This was right before the debate. "It's a very close competition until it isn't." Because at the time they were running neck and neck and this was meant to break him. This is one of the countless examples of the way symbolism is used for coordination. There are many little connections to clue comms-aware readers to the meanings, and this was not the only one.

For example, here's what Tom Hanks posted on social media the day before.

It's one of many examples of what is called an “October surprise”.

In U.S. political jargon, an October surprise is a news event that may influence the outcome of an upcoming November election (particularly one for the U.S. presidency), whether deliberately planned or spontaneously occurring. Because the date for national elections (as well as many state and local elections) is in early November, events that take place in October have greater potential to influence the decisions of prospective voters and allow less time to take remedial action; thus, relatively last-minute news stories could either change the course of an election or

You understand the media was negative to Trump, and so you understand why this message of the CABLE GUY Breaking Trump lines up so perfectly with what happened the next day with Access Hollywood.

This is the first of thousands of examples of symbolism comms you will find on my blog.

The origin of the tape itself was also coordinated with symbolism. It was part of this broadcast titled “The Donald Delivers (Blackmail)”

This was 2005, and note the lines I highlighted. “Donald.... does what he’s told” and “Helping Donald run his lines”. This was the blackmail necessary to trust Trump with the media push he then received. This was the start of his Apprentice run when he went from being a dime-a-dozen celebrity into being among the top 100 people constantly discussed daily for over a decade.

This was his ticket into being a contender. Part of the deal required him to provide his own undoing. To have a secret scandal in a lock box. Something that would not be used to destroy him so long as he played along.

He was being positioned to be the next Ross Perot to split the R vote. They picked Billy Bush of all people because they expected Jeb! As the nominee in 2009. The only problem was Bush’s approval

April Fools 2007 what was Donald Trump doing?

It's been 10 years since the Leader of the Free World shaved Vince McMahon's head

The President of the United States really did this.

The feud continued to escalate until Trump and McMahon decided on a "Battle of the Billionaires" match at WrestleMania 23 in Detroit with the stipulation that the loser would have his head shaved. Trump and McMahon each picked a wrestler to represent them in the ring—Bobby Lashley for Trump, Umaga for McMahon. (You figure the guy who made MAGA his catchphrase would have picked Umaga, but whatever.)

WrestleMania 23 was the 23rd annual WrestleMania professional wrestling pay-per-view event produced by World Wrestling Entertainment. It was held for wrestlers from the promotion's Raw, SmackDown!, and ECW brand divisions. The event took place on April 1, 2007, at Ford Field in Detroit, Michigan.

Jeb Bush surges to lead GOP pack in new 2016 poll

06/22/15 09:15 AM – UPDATED 06/22/15 11:47 AM

By Chuck Todd and Mark Murray

Jeb leads the GOP pack, according to brand-new national NBC/WSJ poll... Who makes that first debate, per the poll? And who gets left off?... Full NBC/WSJ poll comes out at 6:30 pm ET... What dynasty issue?... GOP candidates divided over South Carolina's Confederate flag... And Rick Perry on how NOT to talk about the Charleston shooting.

FIRST THOUGHTS

*** Jeb leads the GOP pack: A brand-new national NBC/WSJ poll finds Jeb Bush leading the crowded Republican presidential field, with 22% of GOP primary voters saying he's their first choice. He's followed by Scott Walker at 17%,

1. Jeb Bush 22%	8. Ted Cruz 4%
2. Scott Walker 17%	9. Chris Christie 4%
3. Marco Rubio 14%	10. Carly Fiorina 2%
4. Ben Carson 11%	11. Donald Trump 1%
5. Mike Huckabee 9%	12. Lindsey Graham 1%
6. Rand Paul 7%
7. Rick Perry 5%

As you can see Jeb was the expected frontrunner. So much of what I'm saying is not a conspiracy but the agreed-on and precise history recorded.

It's a fact that HRC promoted Trump and Cruz above Jeb!

Clinton's Pied Piper Strategy (use media contacts to promote Trump) has backfired spectacularly. PDF of our leak: wikileaks.org/podesta-emails...

Our Goals & Strategy

Our hope is that the goal of a potential HRC campaign and the DNC would be one-in-the-same: to make whomever the Republicans nominate unpalatable to a majority of the electorate. We have outlined three strategies to obtain our goal:

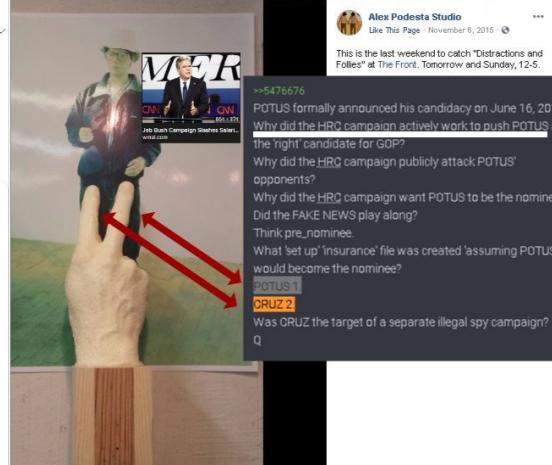

- 1) Force all Republican candidates to lock themselves into extreme conservative positions that will hurt them in a general election;
- 2) Undermine any credibility/trust Republican presidential candidates have to make inroads to our coalition of independents;
- 3) Muddy the waters on any potential attack lodged against HRC.

Operationalizing the Strategy

Pied Piper Candidates

There are two ways to approach the strategies mentioned above. The first is to use the field as a whole to inflict damage on itself similar to what happened to Mitt Romney in 2012. The variety of candidates is a positive here, and many of the lesser known can serve as a cudgel to move the more established candidates further to the right. In this scenario, we don't want to marginalize the more extreme candidates, but make them more "Pied Piper" candidates who actually represent the mainstream of the Republican Party. Pied Piper candidates include, but aren't limited to:

- Ted Cruz
- Donald Trump

I'm not saying Trump was bad with this or that Bush was good, only that Trump got his initial thrust due to an attempt to repeat the Ross Perot VS H.W. Bush VS Bill Clinton match of 1992.

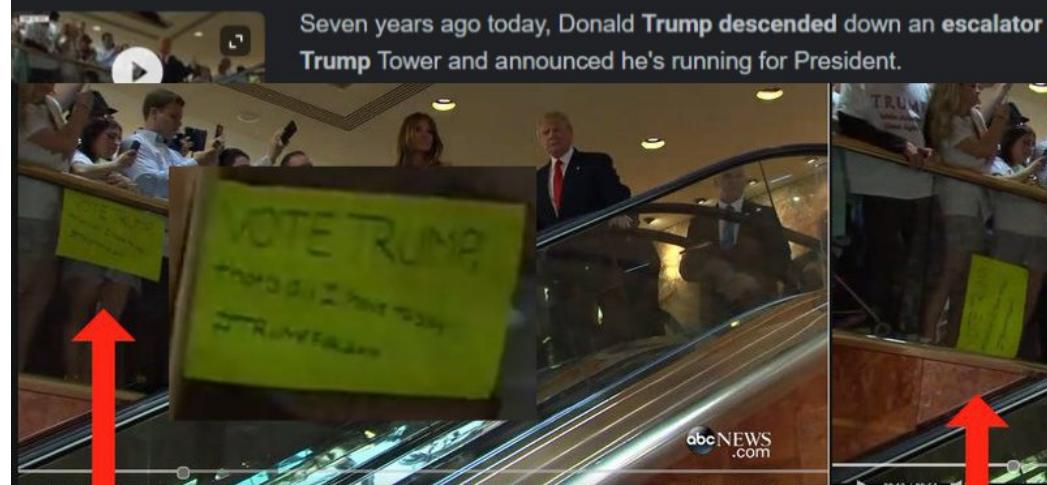

As Wikileaks vouches for, this plan backfired spectacularly.

This is why there was an effort to take down Trump, but critically early on they viewed him as an ally. You can see it in his famous Escalator DECENT.

The Escalator Ride That Changed America - Politico

Jun 14, 2019 — It seemed like a stunt when Donald Trump rode down to make his presidential announcement, and maybe it was. But nothing would be the same ...

Seven Years After Trump Descended 'The Famous Escalator'

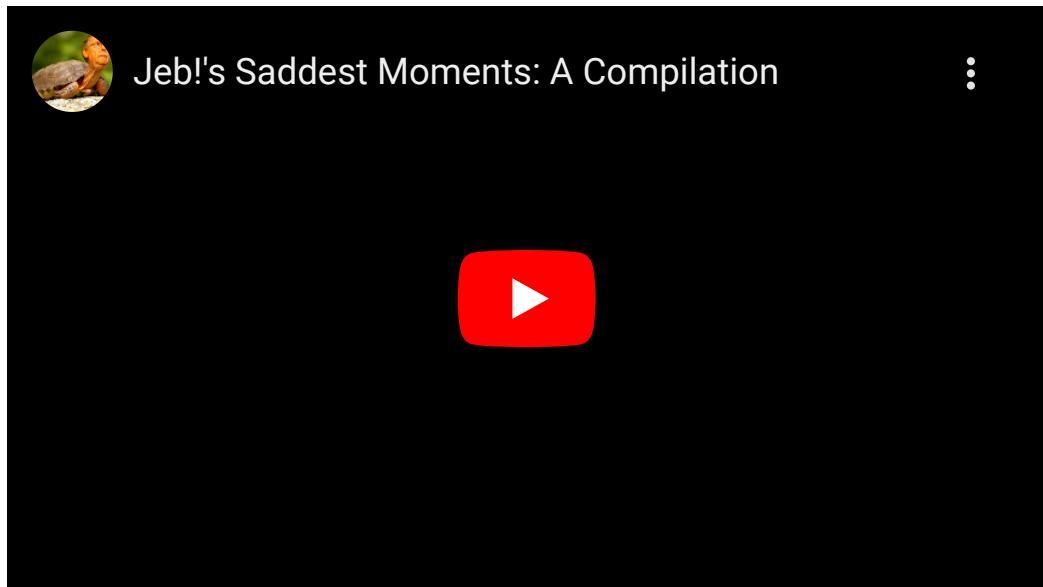

Note how the VOTE TRUMP sign FALLS as he DESCENDS. This was a message sent that he had agreed to go in do damage and then "Fall" to HRC.

The descent itself by the escalator is Symbolism of him starting off with large amounts of tech pushing him to the top of the field and then going lower and lower which would allow HRC to win.

If you don't remember then watch this video.

It's just one of the countless examples of the reaction Trump got. The media loved the damage Trump did at the RNC debates, and it was meant to start strong and peter out, but the descent never happened.

The great secret of the world is nothing more than this language of symbolism. With just this, you know the trick to understanding just about every major event in human history. Every major song, every major movie, every famous person, every famous everything.

That may sound absurd, but then that's the nature of the trick. People are prone to viewing conspiracy theories with skepticism and rightly so in most cases, but the one truth in the world is the real target. Many conspiracy theories that exist are intended to dilute the pool to avoid you from finding this specific one.

The FBI released a list of symbols and logos that perverts use to secretly communicate.

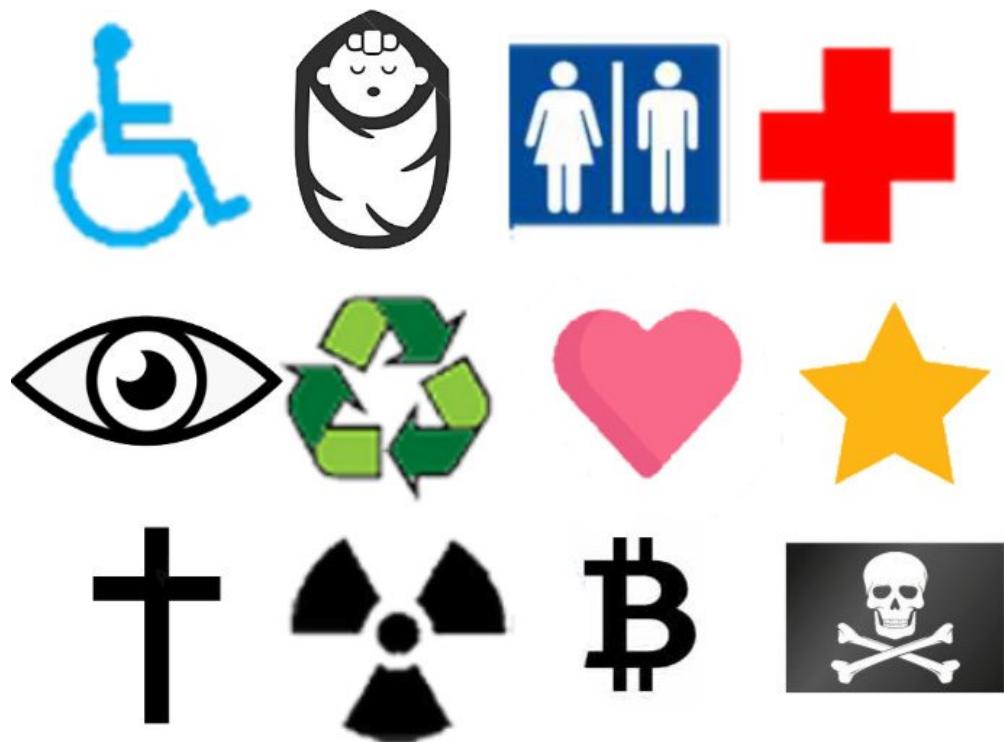

This is proof that criminals hide in plain sight by using symbols around the world. Information that if seen by someone uninitiated will be ignored. This is not a conspiracy theory as you can see above it's a confirmed reality. It is the result of criminals wanting to commit crimes but not being dumb enough to blurt out something that will get them thrown in prison.

The second it's exposed they go from being a useful tool to a liability that triggers investigations. This is objective truth and it's not a secret by any measure, but it does hold a clue to unlocking some of the real secrets of the world. Some are designed to be kept a secret and so their nature can be difficult to explain, but the clue above is in how symbols are used as a tool.

The examples above required a contextual understanding of the situations which I provided. All comms follow this rule and it's why just learning symbolism is only half the trek. You have to be able to think critically to understand what is going on in each case. You have to interpret the symbolism inherent to the circumstance and you have to be able to pick out the message from the noise.

You already do this in day-to-day life.

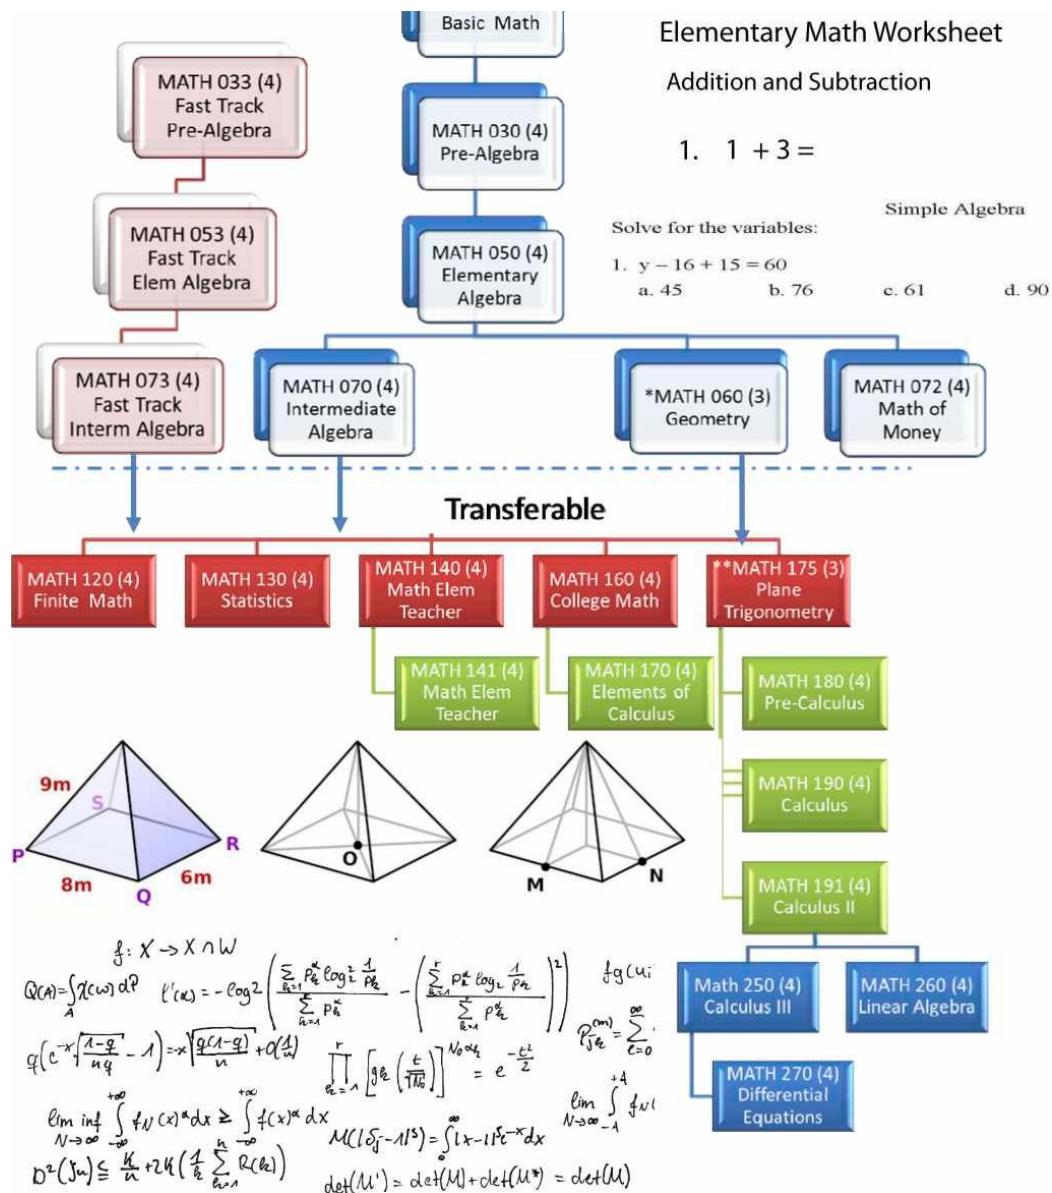

Most people can identify and use hundreds of symbols at any given time. You already use heart emojis to represent love, you already understand that a "star" can represent a celebrity. You already know a red cross represents a healthcare provider and so on.

You can understand a sequence of them.

You already know so many symbols, but you are a novice at putting this into practice.

The secret world of symbolism is like mathematics in that there are many levels and branching paths to mastery. They can get stupidly complex, but do you use stupidly complex math in your day-to-day life?

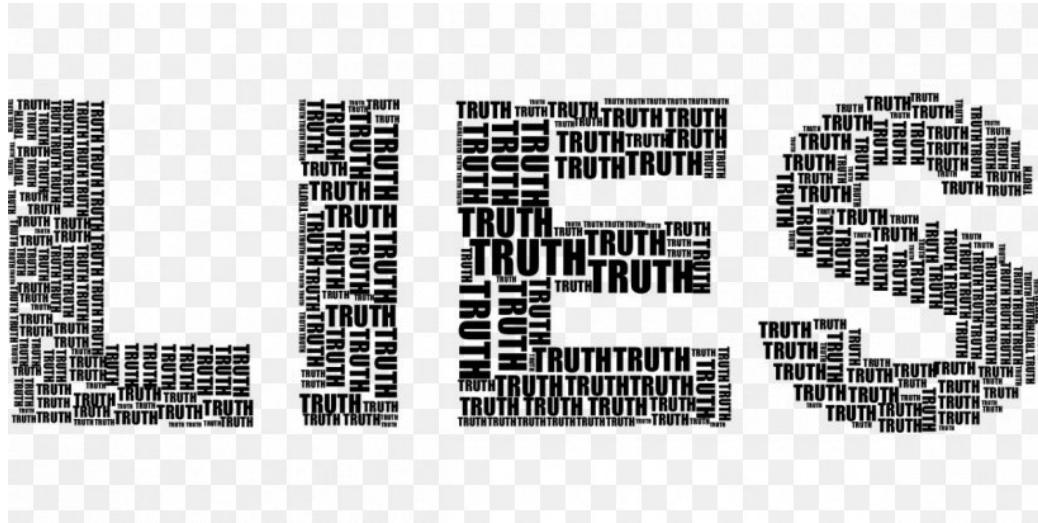

Of course not!

It can get so complex it looks like chicken scratches, but most people that use math daily are going to stick with the simple kind. The same is true for symbols!

We aren't given any resources that have access to the truth. They know you want the truth, so they have engineered a situation where it's not on the table for you to find. You can only find a million things that claim to be true, and most every one of them is just a different lie when you dig deep enough.

The truth remains unsaid, and even tho I'm going to try and say it, the true form of it requires a different way of thinking. Because even though I've said they are liars, there should be an asterisk by that statement because the trick of where the truth hides is inside the lies. Thus while you find lies, inside it is the "Truth" if you were to keep digging into those lies (with the right instrument) you would then find the truth! It's a paradox constructed to keep you from ever seeing the real world.

It is the only logical answer for how so many lies could exist in the first place, because to the people who say them, they aren't lies. They just aren't seeing the same thing you do.

They are used by good and bad people all around the world to coordinate.

Many of the "Bad" people aren't even really bad but are just held

I present thousands of examples just like the Access Hollywood comm I went over before. So long as you understood this comm you can understand almost any comm.

The truth is designed to remain a secret so its nature is difficult to explain. I have many more to share that help clarify what's going on, but so long as you can understand the example above, none of the others should pose a problem.

National Emergency Concerning the Southern Border

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The National Emergency Concerning the Southern Border of the United States (Proclamation 9844) was declared on February 15, 2019, by President of the United States Donald Trump. Citing the National Emergencies Act, it ordered the diversion of billions of dollars of funds that had been appropriated to the U.S. Department of Defense for military construction.<sup>[1][2]</sup> Trump declared the emergency after he signed, but derided, a bipartisan funding bill (passed by the House and the Senate a day before) containing border security funding without funding for the border wall that Trump demanded.<sup>[2][3]</sup> In a proclamation made on February 13, 2020, Trump extended Proclamation 9844 for an additional year; he repeated the one-year extension on January 18, 2021, just two days before leaving office.<sup>[1][8][9]</sup> However, Trump's successor, President Joe Biden, in one of his first official acts as president on January 20, 2021, terminated Trump's emergency declaration and paused

February 11, 2021. Biden wrote in a letter to Congress that the original declaration of national emergency had been "unwarranted" and that no more government funds would be used to build the wall.<sup>[2][1]</sup>

- 02/11/2021 8-year-old BORDER collie named Lulu inherits $5 MILLION
- 02/11/2021 Biden begins process necessary to cut off Billions used for BORDER WALL funding

It's a BORDER COLLIE – and Biden cuts off billions to the BORDER WALL the same day. Notice the details of the story, "can now afford her own security" as the money directed towards the wall is spent elsewhere.

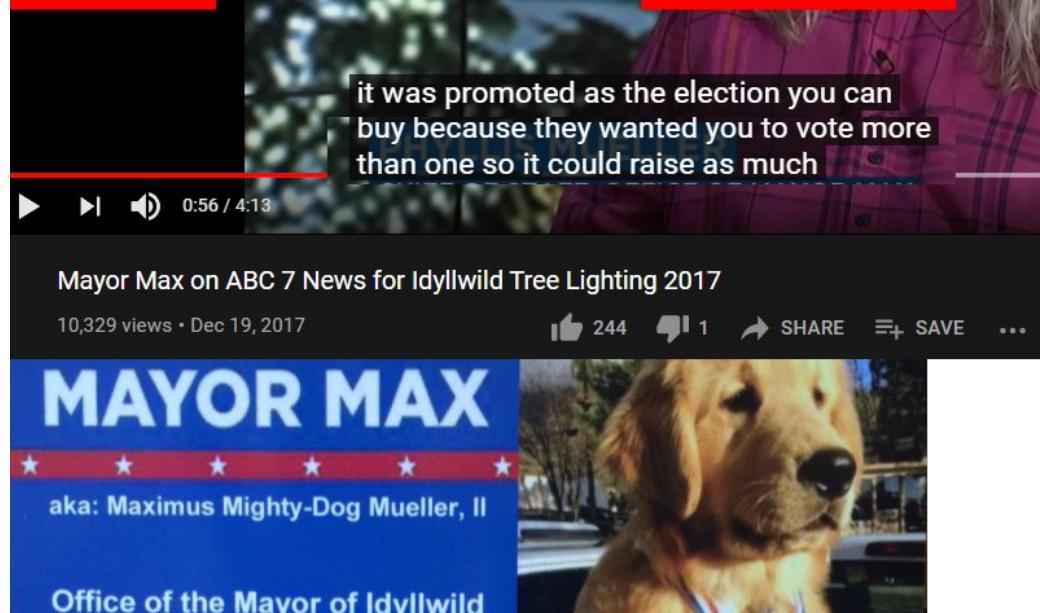

This absurd story about a dog heir is a drop in the bucket at 5 million when you take a step back and see the many billions being discussed. The absurdity of the story exists so that it can be readily carried out in a more engaging way. A less boring way to explain to people upset that the border money is stopping. Without comms it would effectively get lost in the noise of a giant bill.

There are many ways to use animals in comms for example...

Maximus Mighty-Dog Mueller II is the second and current Mayor of Idyllwild, California.<sup>[1]</sup> He has Deputy Mayors (cousins), Mitzi and Mikey.<sup>[2]</sup> The town is known for being one of the first to elect a dog for mayor.<sup>[3]</sup>

As Idyllwild is an unincorporated town, it has no local government. In 2012, as a fundraiser envisioned by, held by, and for the benefit of local animal rescue non-profit organization Idyllwild Animal Rescue Friends (ARF), town locals held an election for which locals could nominate their dogs and cats to run for Mayor. Fourteen dogs and two cats ran, and Max, a Golden Retriever, was elected as its first mayor. In 2013, Mayor Max died, and Maximus Mighty Dog Mueller II, another Golden Retriever, arrived in Idyllwild to complete the remainder of the term. In

Robert Mueller | Facts & Biography | Britannica

 <https://www.britannica.com/biography/Robert-Mueller>

Mueller was set to step down as FBI director in August 2011 as required by a law that set a 10-year term limit for the position. In July, however, Congress approved a bill, which was subsequently signed by Pres. Barack Obama, that allowed Mueller to serve for another two years.

How Long Can an FBI Director Stay in His Position?

 <https://www.thoughtco.com/10-year-limit-fbi-director-3367704>

FBI director Robert Mueller, appointed to the post by President George W. Bush just before the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, served 12 years in the post. President Barack Obama sought a two-year extension to Mueller's term, given the nation's heightened concern about another attack.

Mueller had to leave after 10 years and so they needed another "Mueller" so they sent a comm saying exactly that. We have "Mueller 2"

You can see the finer details of this in the articles.

However, in the middle of his second term, Max passed away, and his owners, Mueller and her husband, started searching for a replacement.

Mueller explained to Travel & Leisure that they searched throughout the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom to find a dog that looked exactly like Max, and ended up bringing home three adorable pups: Max II, as well as his deputy mayors Mitzi and Mikey, who are all of the same bloodline.

The town has continued to love Max II just as much as their original mayor, and in March 2014, it was announced that the pooch would be allowed to serve as the town's mayor for the rest of his life.

They literally went out to find a dog that was exactly the same as the first Mueller.

Now with all that said really look at this timeline.

For new readers, this may be overwhelming so rather than giving you recent comms let’s go back and let me show you the long history of symbolism communication.

Often the most important comms are tied to the most prominent things in the media and those make the best places to begin decoding.

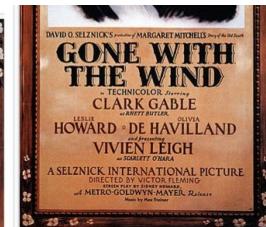

With that in mind... what is the most successful movie ever?

Gone with the Wind

1939's “Gone With the Wind” officially holds that title.

Highest-grossing films as of 2021 adjusted for inflation<sup>[29][Inf]</sup>

Rank	Title	Worldwide gross (2021 $)	Year

3	Titanic	▲$3,260,000,000	1997
4	Star Wars	$3,221,000,000	1977

Why was this so popular? What does “Gone with the Wind” even mean?

The blunt answer in symbolism may seem strange at a glance but give me a few pages to lay out the history and you'll realize this is the only logical answer.

Wind = SPEECH.

Labor [ edit ]

While the introduction of sound led to a boom in the motion picture industry, it had an adverse effect on the employability of a host of Hollywood actors of the time. Suddenly those without stage experience were regarded as suspect by the studios; as suggested above, those whose heavy accents or otherwise discordant voices had previously been concealed were particularly at risk. The career of major silent star Norma Talmadge effectively came to an end in this way. The celebrated German actor Emil Jannings returned to Europe. Moviegoers found John Gilbert's voice an awkward match with his swashbuckling persona, and his star also faded.<sup>[130]</sup> Audiences now seemed to perceive certain silent-era stars as old-fashioned, even those who had the talent to succeed in the sound era. The career of Harold Lloyd, one of the top screen comedians of the 1920s, declined precipitously.<sup>[131]</sup> Lillian Gish departed, back to the stage, and other leading figures soon left acting entirely: Colleen Moore, Gloria Swanson, and Hollywood's most famous performing couple, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford.<sup>[132]</sup> After his acting career collapsed due to his Danish accent, Karl Dane committed suicide. However, the impact of sound on the careers of film actors should not be exaggerated. One statistical analysis of silent actress career length showed that the five-year 'survival-rate' of actresses active in 1922 was only 10% greater than those active after 1927.<sup>[133]</sup> As actress Louise Brooks suggested, there were other issues as well:

Studio heads, now forced into unprecedented decisions, decided to begin with the actors, the least palatable, the most vulnerable part of movie production. It was such a splendid opportunity, anyhow, for breaking contracts, cutting salaries, and taming the stars.... Me, they gave the salary treatment. I could stay on without the raise my contract called for, or quit. [Paramount studio chief B. P.] Schulberg said, using the questionable dodge of whether I'd be good for the talkies. Questionable, I say, because I spoke decent English in a decent voice and came from the theater. So without hesitation I quit.<sup>[134]</sup>

Buster Keaton was eager to explore the new medium, but when his studio, MGM, made the changeover to sound, he was quickly stripped of creative control.

The unkind cover of Photoplay, December 1929, featuring Norma Talmadge. As movie historian David Thomson puts it, "sound proved the incongruity of [her] salon prettiness and tenement voice."<sup>[135]</sup>

It marked the transition from silent films to those with audio. That the countless Silent Movie actors and studios would be "Gone With The Wind". Gone with the introduction of AUDIO which was happening at that time.

"Since ... the cinema is in reality a sort of object lesson which, for good or for evil, teaches the majority of men more effectively than abstract reasoning, it must be elevated to conformity with the aims of a Christian conscience and saved from depraving and demoralizing effects", the pontiff wrote.<sup>[52]</sup>

The most Popular Form of Amusement

There is no need to point out the fact that millions of people go to the motion pictures every day; that motion picture theatres are being opened in ever increasing number in civilized and semi-civilized countries; that the motion picture has become the most popular form of diversion which is offered for the leisure hours not only of the rich but of all classes of society.

At the same time, there does not exist today a means of influencing the masses more potent than the cinema. The reason for this is to be sought for in the very nature of the pictures projected upon the screen, in the popularity of motion picture plays, and in the circumstances which accompany them.

The power of the motion picture consists in this, that it speaks by means of vivid and concrete imagery which the mind takes in with enjoyment and without fatigue. Even the crudest and most primitive minds which have neither the capacity nor the desire to make the efforts necessary for abstraction or deductive reasoning are captivated by the cinema. In place of the effort which reading or listening demands, there is the continued pleasure of a succession of concrete and, so to speak, living pictures.

This power is still greater in the talking picture for the reason that interpretation becomes even easier and the charm of music is added to the action of the drama. Dances and variety acts which are sometimes introduced between the films serve to increase the stimulation of the passions.

Clark Gable became "King of Hollywood" thru Gone with the Wind. A title he inherited from Douglas Fairbanks who died the same week the movie was released.

The fact that he died 3 days before release is not why the title changed hands. Why then?

Douglas Elton Fairbanks Sr.<sup>[1]</sup> (born Douglas Elton Thomas Ullman; May 23, 1883 – December 12, 1939) was an American actor, screenwriter, director, and producer.<sup>[2]</sup> He was best known for his swashbuckling roles in silent films including The Thief of Bagdad, Robin Hood, and The Mark of Zorro, but spent the early part of his career making comedies.

Fairbanks was a founding member of United Artists. He was also a founding member of The Motion Picture Academy and hosted the 1st Academy Awards in 1929. With his marriage to actress and film producer Mary Pickford in 1920, the couple became 'Hollywood royalty', and Fairbanks was referred to as "The King of Hollywood",<sup>[3]</sup> a nickname later passed on to actor Clark Gable.

Though he was considered one of the biggest stars in Hollywood during the 1910s and 1920s, Fairbanks's career rapidly declined with the advent of the "talkies". His final film was The Private Life of Don Juan

Douglas Elton Fairbanks had a career that died in the 1930s during the transition from silent pictures to "Talkies"

Clark Gable takes over the title of "King of Hollywood" as he could talk and this guy could not! He was the king of SILENT MOVIES, and like so many others he was GONE WITH THE WIND (due to his accent) once he was required to talk!

This answers everything about "Gone with the Wind" especially why it was so popular.

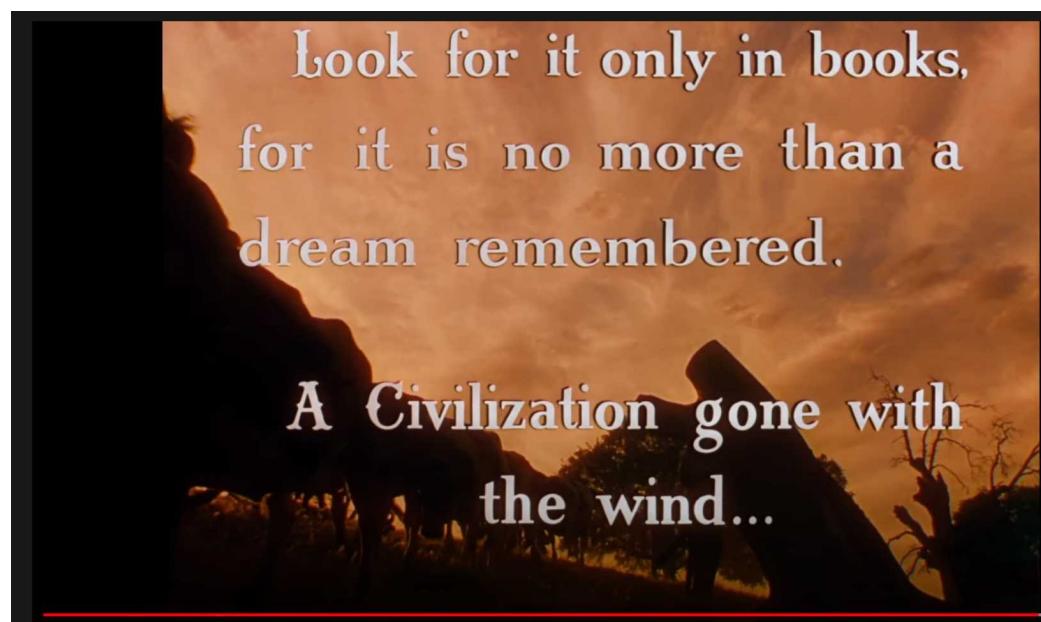

The book it was adapted from did too, this is why the very first line describes the main character as NOT BEAUTIFUL.

But she could charm just the same. How? TALKING, it's a major point of the book/movie the dialog between her and Clark Gable. The book was written to be adapted into a film, demonstrating what could be done with talking pictures.

Wind = Speech.

In fact, the very first part of the film is asserting "Gone with the wind" means precisely that. The assertion that the old way of doing things is gone forever. This was not a line in the book.

The main character Clark GABLE. Gable?

Gab + Able. Able to "Gab" able to speak.

This transition is embodied in the actor. A message sent that the silent age of films was over. That just having a pretty face was no longer enough. This film was promoted to punctuate the changing of an age.

This is also likely why "Fairbanks" "died" the same week as the Silent Era was being said to be over.

Likely he was a comms vehicle for funding. I've decoded other big celebrities with the names of "Banks" as such. A fake death so as to further drive home the message that the entire prior industry of Silent Films were now Gone with the Wind.

The most famous movie line by most measures is the final one of the film.

"Where shall I go? What shall I do?"

Rank	Quotation	Actor/Actress	Movie
1	"Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn."	Clark Gable	Gone with the Wind
2	"I'm gonna make him an offer he can't refuse."	Marlon Brando	The Godfather

"Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn" is a line from the 1939 film Gone with the Wind starring Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh. The line is spoken by Rhett Butler

(Gable), as his last words to Scarlett O'Hara (Leigh), in response to her tearful question: "Where shall I go? What shall I do?" Scarlett clings to the hope that she can win him back. This line is slightly different in Margaret Mitchell's 1936 novel Gone with the Wind, from which the film is derived: "My dear, I don't give a damn."<sup>[1]</sup>

I suspect this was the symbol of multitudes of out-of-work due to being unable to speak. The apathy towards their plight is well documented by the film industry and it represents that.

This wasn't the only marker for this transition.

This is why it also had “wind” symbolism built in because the whole thing was about sending your VOICE LONG DISTANCES. As in across country to Germany which was the longest line ever made and so it fits they would celebrate it with a marker like this.

Fast forward a few decades and they need to send a comm about another technological transition. The change to “Talkies” Wizard of Oz fit perfectly as it was already about that, but this is not the only reason they would create these markers. Especially for Gone With The Wind which seems to have been specifically made to send these messages.

Given how expensive it was to convert silent movies to “talkies” it is likely there were holdouts and this was a strongly worded rejection of trying to hang on to the past (just as Scarlett did) It was only after she lost everything that she realized she loved “Gable” after all. It ends with her proclaiming she would go back to her family farm and show "Gable" that she did in fact love him from then on.

Scarlett has a father in the story with a thick Irish accent as a major plot point. This is interesting because having a thick accent is what killed most careers of the time.

Ok, let's wrap this subject up. Who is behind this massive coordination to revolutionize broadcast?

Part of the answer is Government.

Why is this connected to nuclear bombs?

Let's go into a bit of basic history and critical thinking about Nuclear Bombs, the connection will become clear as we do. Especially in relation to Hugh Hefner.

In WW2 it took 1,249 Heavy bombers to drop 3,900 tons of bombs to destroy 1,600 acres of land.

Bombing of Dresden in World War II - Wikipedia

W https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bombing\_of\_Dresden

In four raids between 13 and 15 February 1945, 722 heavy bombers of the British Royal Air Force (RAF) and 527 of the United States Army Air Forces (USAAF) dropped more than 3,900 tons of high-explosive bombs and incendiary devices on the city. The bombing and the resulting firestorm destroyed more than 1,600 acres (6.5 km<sup>2</sup>) of the city centre.

The first nuclear bomb achieved 5x times that!

Therefore it would take over 5,000 non-nuclear heavy bombers with about 50,000 soldiers working around the clock for weeks to equal one airplane with one bomb in one flight.

And that's just a crappy old and small one! It already destroys cities effortlessly!

Fast forward 16 years from the city destroying bombs and they increased the yield by 1,570X!

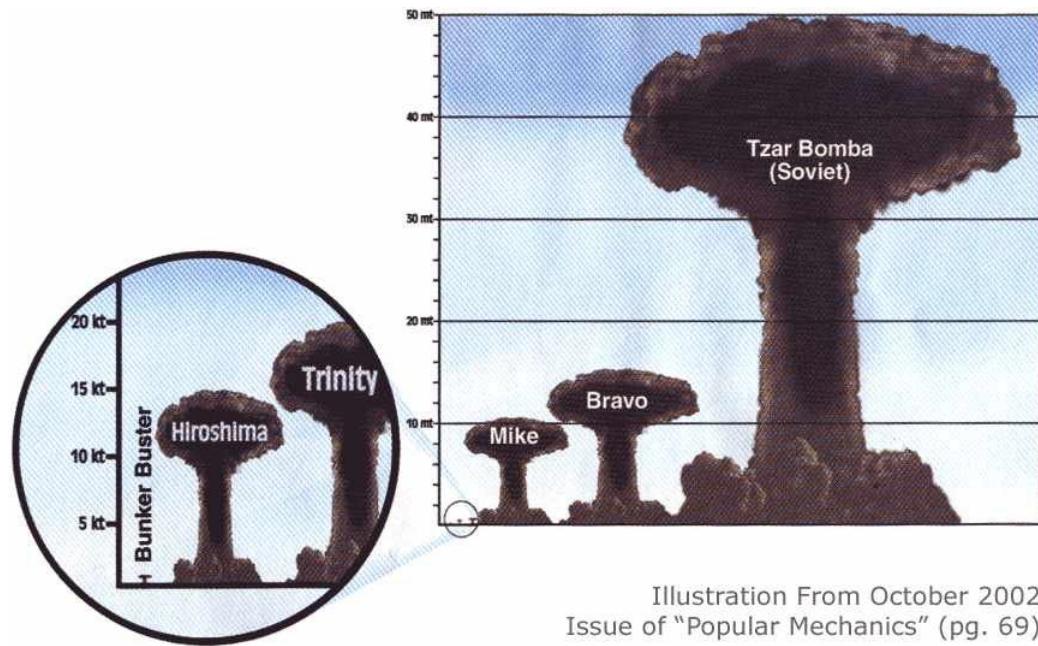

Illustration From October 2002 Issue of "Popular Mechanics" (pg. 69)

The Tsar Bomba (Russian: Царь-бомба), (code name: Ivan<sup>[5]</sup> or Vanya), also known by the alphanumeric designation AN602, was a hydrogen aerial bomb, and the most powerful nuclear weapon ever created and tested. Tested on 30 October 1961, the scientific result of the test was the experimental verification of calculation principles

Have to use a microscope to see the city destroyers.

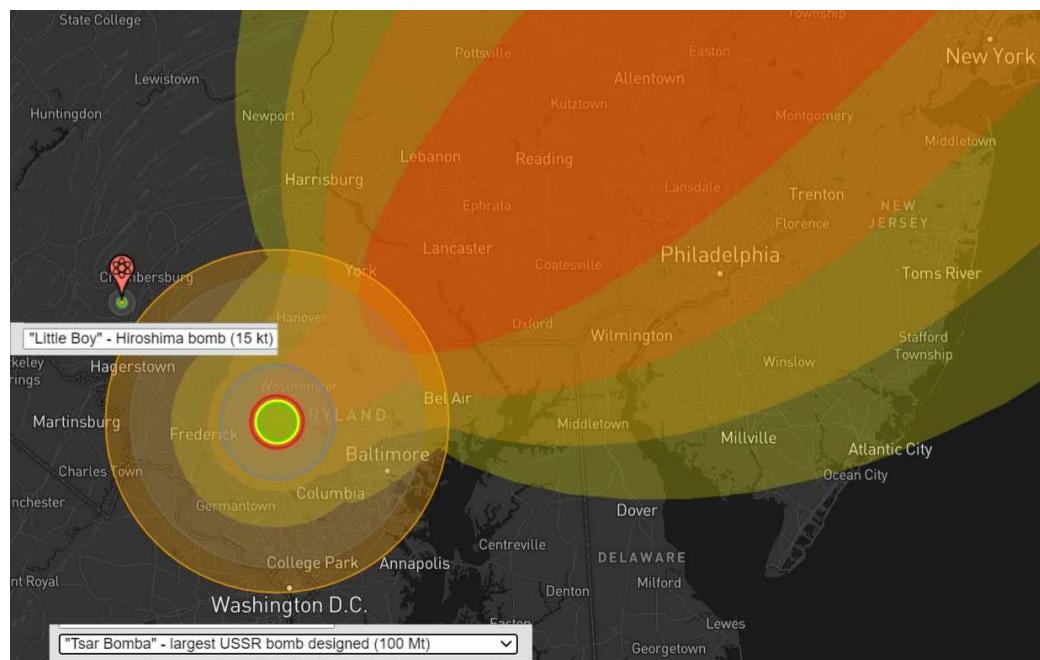

And since we have increased the yield by 1,570 that means we'd need at least a MILLION HEAVY BOMBERS staffed with MILLIONS OF SOLDIERS working non-stop for months to achieve the same result.

The detonation was astronomically powerful—over 1,570 times more powerful, in fact, than the combined two bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The Tsar Bomba's yield was 50 megatons: ten times more powerful than all of the ordnance exploded during the whole of World War II. The mushroom

That's just 1961!

If I apply the same scaling from then until today these bombs would probably be at planet destroying power by now! Or not... Do you get the impression there's something a bit "off" about all of this?

Because they are so restrictive it's not like anyone can go out and confirm any of it after all.

Can we trust what the media and governments tell us about nuclear weapons?

Q said the "cult ran the world" and Q also said they wanted to kill many people. Those two statements are incompatible with the reality we are fed about nuclear weapons.

Not one of them ever decided to use a nuclear weapon against any enemy?

Especially when Russia was so lax about them that dozens went missing!

Among these releases, Lebed in an interview with CBS newsmagazine Sixty Minutes on 7 September 1997 claimed that the Russian military had lost track of more than a hundred out of a total of 250 "suitcase-sized nuclear bombs". Lebed stated that these devices were made to look like suitcases, capacity to kill 100,000 people each. Present in the witness panel to help corroborate Lunev suggested that suitcase nukes might be already deployed by the GRU operatives on US soil Bombs small enough to fit in a suitcase and can destroy an entire city!

Even if we ignore the many nuclear bombs that were lost, there are third-world countries with them like North Korea that could deploy them or how about POTUS? <https://www.wired.com/story/donald-trump-nuclear-weapons-system-reform/> There isn't even a safeguard in place for them in 1st world countries! They are designed to be deployable by the commander-in-chief at any time at their own discretion.

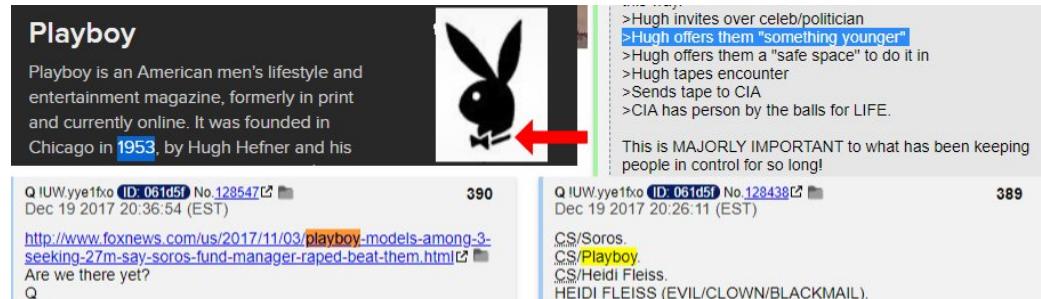

If we go by official accounts, if we assume the media is telling the truth then there is a "destroy every human on earth button" by triggering a nuclear war that exists. The president has their finger on that trigger at all times and there is no way to stop them from doing it.

It doesn't make sense for a reason.

The truth is Nuclear bombs are real, but they are not what they are said to be. Once you understand the reason there is a disconnect between reality and the narrative, you can use that as a crowbar to pry out the rest of the secrets of the world.

Let's go deeper into the Hefner "Rabbit" hole.

Playboy began in 1953 using a nude Marilyn Monroe. It's notable that she failed as an actress until she had nude photos taken of her, and at that point, she instantly became a superstar.

That was, of course, because neither was legally required. In 1949, a cash-strapped, jobless Monroe posed nude for pinup photographer Tom Kelley in exchange for the $50 she needed to make a car payment, as described in her friend, photographer George Barris' 1995 book, Marilyn: Her Life in Her Own Words.

just one year after she posed for the photos out of desperation, Monroe had begun to find great success as an actor, appearing as Hefner quickly hitched his wagon to Monroe's rapidly rising star. He purchased the rights to Monroe's nude photos from the Chicago-area company in fall 1953 for a reported $500. As described in Playboy's first issue: "There were actually two poses shot au naturel back in '49, just before the gorgeous blonde got her first movie

The point being Hefner had access in the world of nude starlets from day 1 of Playboy. So if we dig into his history before it, what might we find?

Q clearance or Q access authorization is the Department of Energy (DOE) security clearance required to access Top Secret Restricted Data, Formerly Restricted Data, National Security Information, as well as Secret Restricted Data. Restricted Data (RD) is defined in the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 and covers nuclear weapons and related materials. The lower-level L clearance is sufficient for access to Secret Formerly Restricted Data (FRD) and National Security Information, as well as Confidential Restricted Data, Formerly Restricted Data, and National Security Information.<sup>[12]</sup> Access to Restricted Data is only granted on a need-to-know basis to personnel with appropriate clearances.

& Q Clearance is equivalent to a United States Department of Defense Top Secret Clearance. For access

Birth of the Bikini

July 5, 1946 - Skimpy two-piece outfits have been around for thousands of years, but today was the day the modern "bikini" made its debut.

A French car engineer named Louis Réard was working in his mother's lingerie boutique. Fashion designer Jacques Heim had just introduced what he called the world's "smallest bathing suit." The bottom of the outfit was big enough to cover the woman's navel, so Réard simply sliced a bit off so that the belly button could be revealed. He advertised his alteration as "smaller than the world's smallest swimsuit."

The first atomic bomb to be detonated in Operation Crossroads was code-named Able, and it was a plutonium bomb that exploded in the air over 80 unmanned target vessels in the Bikini Atoll lagoon on July 1, 1946. Able was part of a series of nuclear tests conducted that summer.

<https://www.bikiniatoll.info> - nuclear-testing-at-bikini-atoll - Bikini Atoll Nuclear Tests | Atomic Veterans Cancer Benefit ...

Réard was also the one who gave the bikini its name. The Bikini Atoll had been in the news that summer as the location of atomic testing in the South Pacific. The idea was that this new fashion statement would make an equally dramatic impact.

One problem Réard had was finding a model who was willing to wear the controversial suit. He wound up using a stripper named Micheline Bernardini. She proudly modeled the outfit at Piscine Molitor, a public pool in Paris. Her tiny bikini made a giant splash and Bernardini received over 50,000 letters from appreciative fans.

The nuclear testing at Bikini Atoll program was a series of 23 nuclear devices detonated by the United States between 1946 and 1958 at seven test sites on the reef itself, on the sea, in the air and underwater. The test weapons produced a combined fission yield of 42.2 Mt of explosive power.

London (AFP) - British jeweller Graff said Tuesday it has purchased the world's largest uncut diamond -- roughly the size of a tennis ball -- for $53 million (44.5 million euros).

Canadian miner Lucara Diamond sold to Graff the 1,109-carat gem, the Lesedi La Rona, which was found in Botswana's Karowe mine in late 2015.

"We are thrilled and honoured to become the new custodians of this incredible diamond," said company chairman, Laurence Graff, in a statement.

More than 50 million light-years away, in the heart of a giant elliptical galaxy called Messier 87, a gargantuan beast is devouring anything that strays too near. Stars, planets, gas, and dust—not even light escapes the monster's grasp once it crosses a threshold called the event horizon. Today, scientists unveiled an image of that object, a supermassive black hole containing the same mass as 6.5 billion suns. Resembling a circular void surrounded by a lopsided ring of light, this landmark image is the

With that in mind we can go back and look at the symbolism of that time. This will seem childish at first, but that's just how some comms are. (It helps with keeping them hidden.)

The first nuclear bomb was Uranium (Root word Uranus) which powered the "Little Boy" nuclear bomb Dropped from the "Enola Gay" (Enola=Alone backward)

Enola Gay

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

This article is about the bomber. For the song, see Enola Gay (song).

The Enola Gay (/ɛnələ ɡeɪ/) is a Boeing B-29 Superfortress bomber, named after Enola Gay Tibbets, the mother of the pilot, Colonel Paul Tibbets. On 6 August 1945, during the final stages of World War II, it became the first aircraft to drop an atomic bomb. The bomb, code-named "Little Boy", was targeted at the city of Hiroshima, Japan, and caused the near-complete destruction of the city. Enola Gay participated in the second atomic attack as the weather reconnaissance aircraft for the primary target of Kokura. Clouds and drifting smoke resulted in a secondary target, Nagasaki, being bombed instead.

After the war, the Enola Gay returned to the United States, where it was operated from Roswell Army Air Field, New Mexico. In May 1946, it was flown to Kwajalein for the Operation Crossroads nuclear tests in the Pacific, but was not chosen to make the test drop at Bikini Atoll. Later that year it was transferred to the Smithsonian Institution, and spent many years parked at air bases exposed to the weather and souvenir hunters, before being disassembled and transported to the Smithsonian's storage facility at Suitland, Maryland, in 1961.

With these new definitions, the original meanings of "carefree", "joyful", and "bright and showy" were still around; so the word was not exclusively used to refer to prostitutes or a promiscuous man. Those were just accepted definitions, along with the other meanings of the word.

Around the 1920s and 1930s, however, the word started to have a new meaning. In terms of the sexual meaning of the word, a "gay man" no longer just meant a man who had sex with a lot of women, but now started to refer to men who had sex with other men. There was also another word "gey cat" at this time which meant a homosexual boy.

By 1955, the word gay now officially acquired the new added definition of meaning homosexual males. Gay men

The term “Gay” had only the decade prior been solidified in popular usage as meaning homosexual man + boy. So it couldn’t be more perfect for a symbol.

Meaning someone was removed thru blackmail, note the most powerful Senator was announced dead the same day.

The Dean of the United States Senate is an informal term for the senator with the longest continuous service, regardless of party affiliation. This is not an official position within the Senate, although customarily (since 1945) the longest-serving member of the majority party serves as president pro tempore.

A president pro tempore or speaker pro tempore is a constitutionally recognized officer of a legislative body who presides over the chamber in the absence of the normal presiding officer.

I believe this removal is the “Nuclear bomb” the big BOOM.

Death Ends Career of Sen. Johnson

Californian Fought to Last Against All Foreign Alliances

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6. (AP)—Sen. Hiram Warren Johnson died today, fighting to the end the battle against tie-ups with foreign nations which he began a quarter-century ago in the bitter battle against the League of Nations.

Death, attributed by his physician to thrombosis of a cerebral artery, came at 6:40 a.m. in Bethesda Naval Hospital.

The 78-year-old California Republican, a national political figure since early in the century, had been under treatment there for two and a half weeks. He was in a coma when the end came.

The silver-haired Johnson, long a fire-breathing debater in the Senate, had been heard seldom on the floor in recent months. But he was still a factor to be reckoned with in committee room and cloak room.

He had been expected to come out again to the open fighting in the Senate chamber in opposition to the charter, but illness intervened.

Recent 'Quakes' Now Revealed as Bomb Blasts

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Many of the earthquakes that Southern California has experienced in the last three years weren't earthquakes at all, but the explosion of atomic bombs.

Larry Crosby, general manager of the Bing Crosby Enterprises, which include the Crosby Research Foundation, said last night the foundation had been using its facilities for about three years in assisting the government in developing the bomb. California Institute of Technology physicists aided in the work.

"We have been sworn to secrecy," said Crosby, "and it isn't my purpose now to discuss any of the methods used in extracting the atomic energy from uranium. I see no reason, however, not to say that in our detonation tests, made in desert country not far from Los Angeles, the explosion of a pea-size amount created a hole in the desert big enough to drop in a large-size house."

"Workers had to use tongs 10 feet long in extracting the energy from uranium. It is taken at extremely high temperature. An unusually large amount of materials has to be used to extract

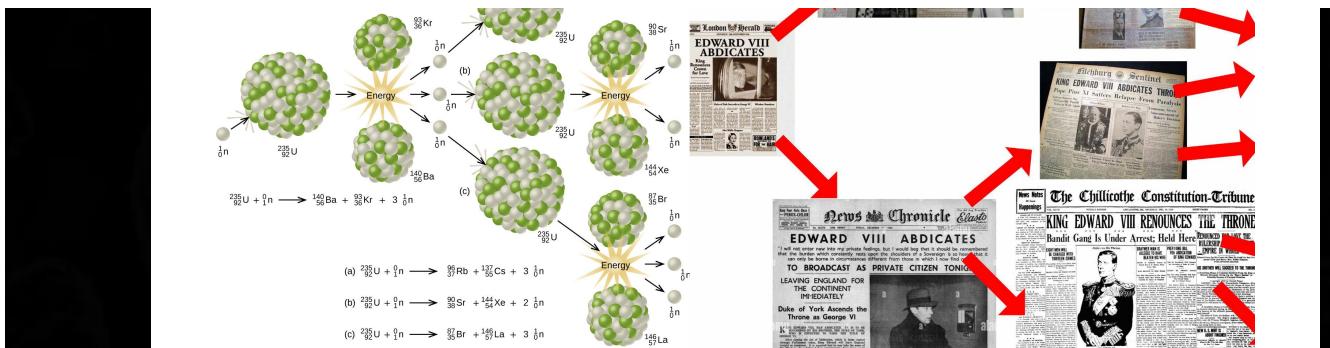

Note the senator fought “till the end” to keep Truman from allying with foreign governments. He was expected to start a fight about this again with Truman, but then suddenly died.

This wouldn't mean much to Japan you might think, but you have to take it in the context of the next bomb which wouldn't work if this guy were in power.

This concept of a nuclear chain reaction. Just replace the particles with newspapers across the country. The birth of a scandal.

Kind of like this.

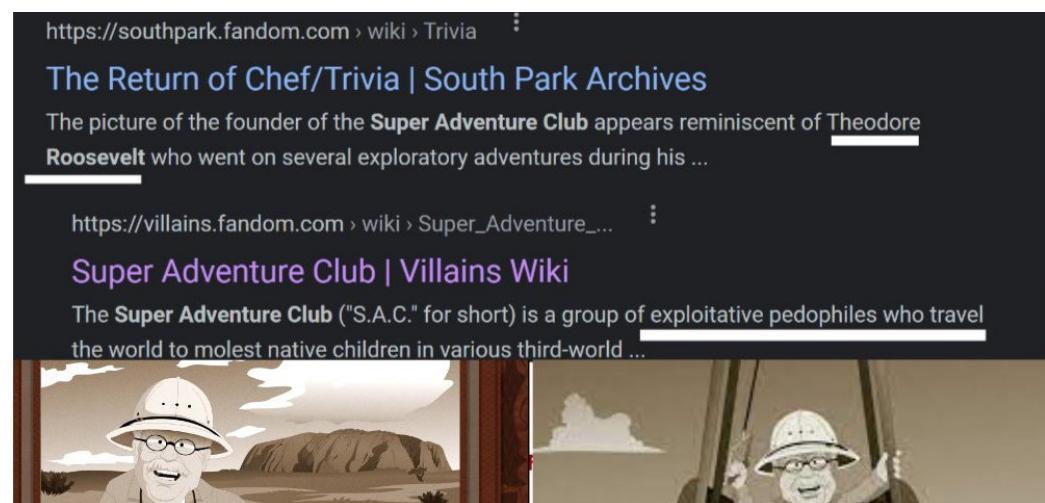

Hiram Johnson was Teddy Roosevelt's running mate for the 1912 election. This is when they beat the Republican party by splitting the vote with a 3rd party. It allowed the famously uber-racist Woodrow Wilson into the WH.

It was only the 2nd nuclear bomb when Japan reacted. Instead of URANIUM Blackmail it's PLUTONIUM. Which is not a blackmail comm. Instead, it's a comm about force.

For some papers the Nuclear bomb got equal billing, but in the vast majority, it was the Soviet Union that was the big news.

BOOM symbolism. Same idea as before. Taking over the country = BOOM.

You may be wondering about nuclear power, well...

A traditional plant burns coal, oil, or natural gas, using them to boil water into steam. The steam turns turbines, which drive a generator and makes electricity. Nuclear Power plants do the same thing except instead of using coal/oil/gas it uses “Uranium”

Instead of a fictional metal “Uranium” I suspect they use a chemical combination that heats the water. I know the military has chemicals that can heat water as they are standard issue in MREs, the only question is whether that technology can be scaled up to the levels necessary here. That is just a hypothesis and there are many other possibilities. The only thing that is crystal clear about this is it doesn’t work like they say it does.

If I’m right then the “nuclear” version is a secret because it’s a safe and low cost energy that if exposed would have the public demanding it power everything. The only way every other energy company survives is to keep it a secret, hence they invented a mysterious element they say is used to power it.

An element so dangerous that everyone has to follow a strict protocol of never ever being around it, or touching it, and anyone who so much as photographs the insides of the machinery is arrested.

My posts on nuclear-inspired people to contact me about it, and while they could be lying they also might not be. They agreed with my deconstruction (If we can trust people online saying they are in that industry lol, I admit I could be tricked, but they demonstrated intelligence if nothing else)

Finding and examining the Scorpion was especially important, Ballard told CNN:

"What they wanted me to do was go back and not have the Russians follow me, because we were interested in the nuclear weapons that were on the Scorpion and also what the nuclear reactors (were) doing to the environment."

The mission was billed purely as a hunt for the Titanic, and media was kept entirely in the dark. The cover didn't provide much relief on the ocean floor, though: After locating and examining both submarines, Ballard's team only had 12 days to find the Titanic and record their findings.

That condition is that he finds the old nuclear weapons left on the long-lost Scorpion Submarine.

He had to find nuclear subs that sank in the 60s and remove the nuclear weapons. It was important he locate the nuclear weapons on these ships without the Russians following.

This has nothing to do with Submarines and everything to do with Titanic, but to understand why they told this cover I have to get into history.

The story most conspiracy-minded people understand is that the Titanic was crashed in 1912 to remove opposition to the FED.

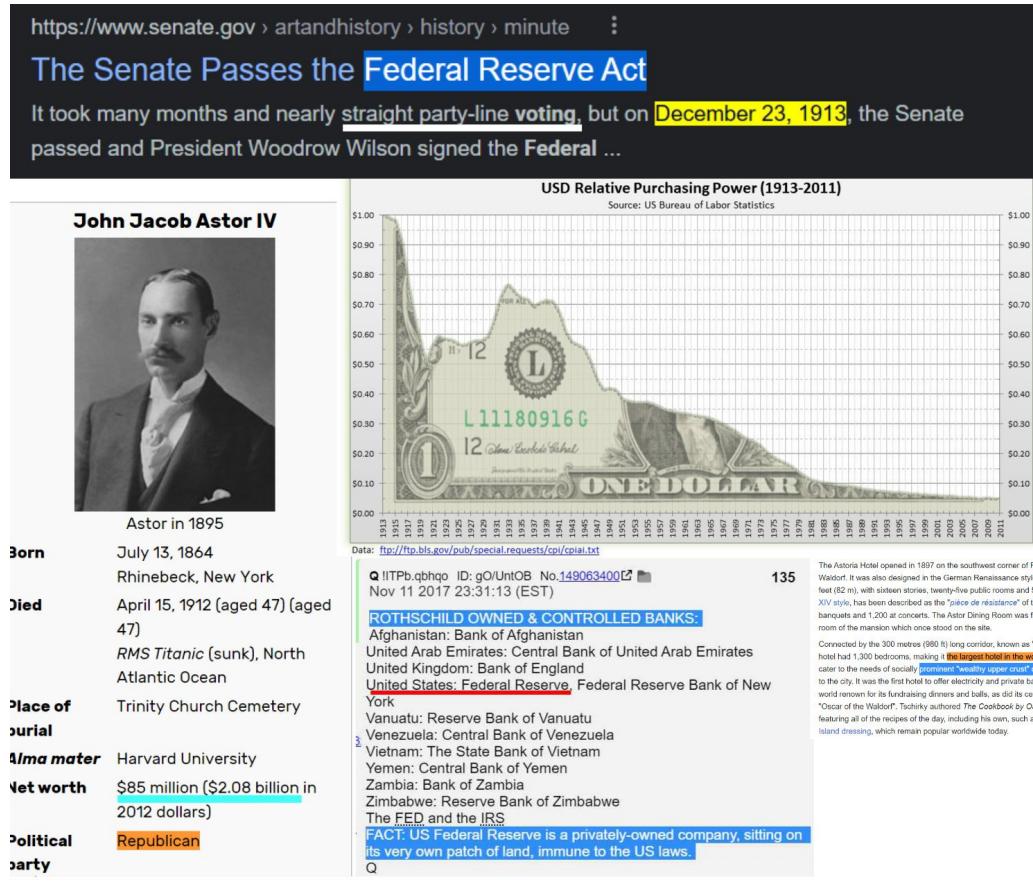

Why would it be a problem to see the Titanic wreck? Let's start from the beginning...

Notice how despite so many dead the newspapers only cared about J.J. Astor? There's a reason for that.

The basic story most conspiracy-minded people understand is that the Titanic was crashed in 1912 to remove opposition to the Federal Reserve.

This is true, you can understand this easily by recognizing the most famous death was a powerful Republican who ran the world's largest hotel (blackmail) i.e. he held the strings on the Republicans and that was who was against the Federal Reserve. Doesn't take a genius, here, but there's still a much deeper level.

The Titanic crash accomplished 1 goal outside of the Fed which is critical to understand.

The Titanic had a sister ship named the Olympic. The Olympic crashed just before Titanic launched.

Olympic's first major mishap occurred on her fifth voyage on 20 September 1911, when she collided with the British cruiser HMS Hawke.<sup>[45]</sup> The collision took place as Olympic and Hawke were running parallel to each other through the Solent. As Olympic turned to starboard, the wide radius of her turn took the commander of Hawke by surprise, and he was unable to take sufficient avoiding action.<sup>[46]</sup> Hawke's bow, which had been designed to sink ships by ramming them, collided with Olympic's starboard side near the stern,<sup>[47]</sup> tearing two large holes in Olympic's hull, above and below the waterline, resulting in the flooding of two of her watertight compartments and a twisted propeller shaft. Despite this, Olympic was able to return to Southampton under her own power; no one was seriously injured or killed. HMS Hawke suffered severe damage to her bow and nearly capsized;<sup>[48]</sup> she was repaired, but sunk by the German U-boat SM U-9 in October 1914.

Captain Edward Smith was in command of Olympic at the time of the incident. Two crew members, stewardess Violet Jessop and stoker Arthur John Priest,<sup>[49]</sup> survived not only the collision with Hawke but also the later sinking of Titanic and the 1916 sinking of Britannic, the third ship of the class.<sup>[50][51]</sup>

At the subsequent inquiry the Royal Navy blamed Olympic for the incident, alleging that her large displacement generated a suction that pulled Hawke into her side.<sup>[52][53]</sup> The Hawke incident was a financial disaster for Olympic's operator. A legal argument ensued which decided that the blame for the incident lay with Olympic, and although the ship was technically under the control of the harbour pilot, the White Star Line was faced with large legal bills and the cost of repairing the ship, and keeping her out of revenue service made matters worse.<sup>[46][54][55]</sup> However, the fact that Olympic endured such a serious collision and stayed afloat, appeared to vindicate the design of the Olympic-class liners and reinforced their "unsinkable" reputation.<sup>[46]</sup>

It took two weeks for the damage to Olympic to be patched up sufficiently to allow her to return to Belfast for permanent repairs, which took just over six weeks to complete.<sup>[56]</sup> To expedite repairs, Harland and Wolff was obliged to replace Olympic's damaged propeller shaft with one from Titanic, delaying the latter's completion.<sup>[57]</sup> By 20 November Olympic was back in service, but, on 24 February 1912, suffered another setback when she lost a propeller blade on an eastbound voyage from New

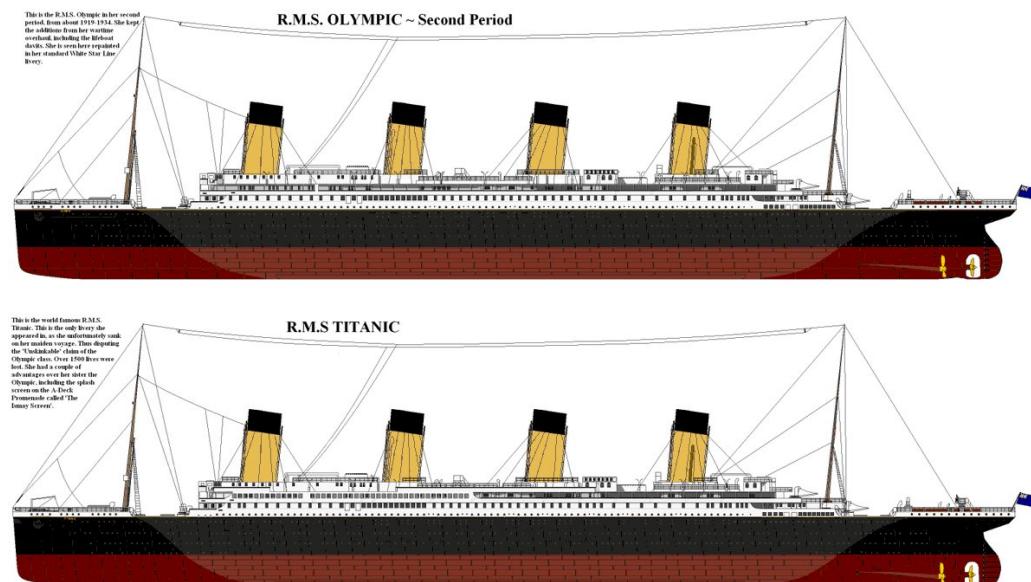

Note the replacement of the Olympics damaged propeller with the one from Titanic.

When the British military crashed into the Olympic they refused to pay cost and this would bankrupt the company.

How to get around this?

The Titanic and Olympic were nearly identical!

All they did was dress one up as the other and sink it in a way
Insurance would pay!

An insurance scam. They couldn't get Olympic insurance on the crash because it was a military boat.

This was by design as they forced the owner into cooperation for their goal of taking out Astor and the other opponents to the Federal Reserve.

I think the plan was presented as harmless to the owner as there were rescue ships that should have made it in time, but they didn't, obviously.

Anyway... the point is Titanic became a NUCLEAR SHIP because its existence if photos were taken would reveal the switch and open up all kinds of legal time bombs and scandals. Therefore they had to get to the ship in 1985 and then damage it in ways that made photos irrelevant.

The Hunt for the Titanic Was Actually a Hunt for Lost U.S. Nuclear Submarines

Robert Ballard had to do the Navy a favor before he could proceed with his hunt for the famed ship.

Finding and examining the Scorpion was especially important, Ballard told CNN:

"What they wanted me to do was go back and not have the Russians follow me, because we were interested in the nuclear weapons that were on the Scorpion and also what the nuclear reactors (were) doing to the environment."

The mission was billed purely as a hunt for the Titanic, and media was kept entirely in the dark. The cover didn't provide much relief on the ocean floor, though: After locating and examining both submarines, Ballard's team only had 12 days to find the Titanic and record their findings.

There is still another level to this because none of that answers what the missing Nuclear Submarine was all about.

Notice this nuclear sub was ordered January of 1957 the same month the CIA began funding MK-Ultra experiments at the Allan

During the Cold War, the CIA secretly funded mind-control experiments on unwitting Canadians in a program codenamed MK ULTRA. The experiments laid the groundwork for modern-day torture techniques. And victims and their families are still seeking recognition and justice.

"Oh, 'He was God-like,' they would say," said Lloyd Schrier. "I think he was head of the Canadian and the American psychiatric associations. And even the World Psychiatric Association."

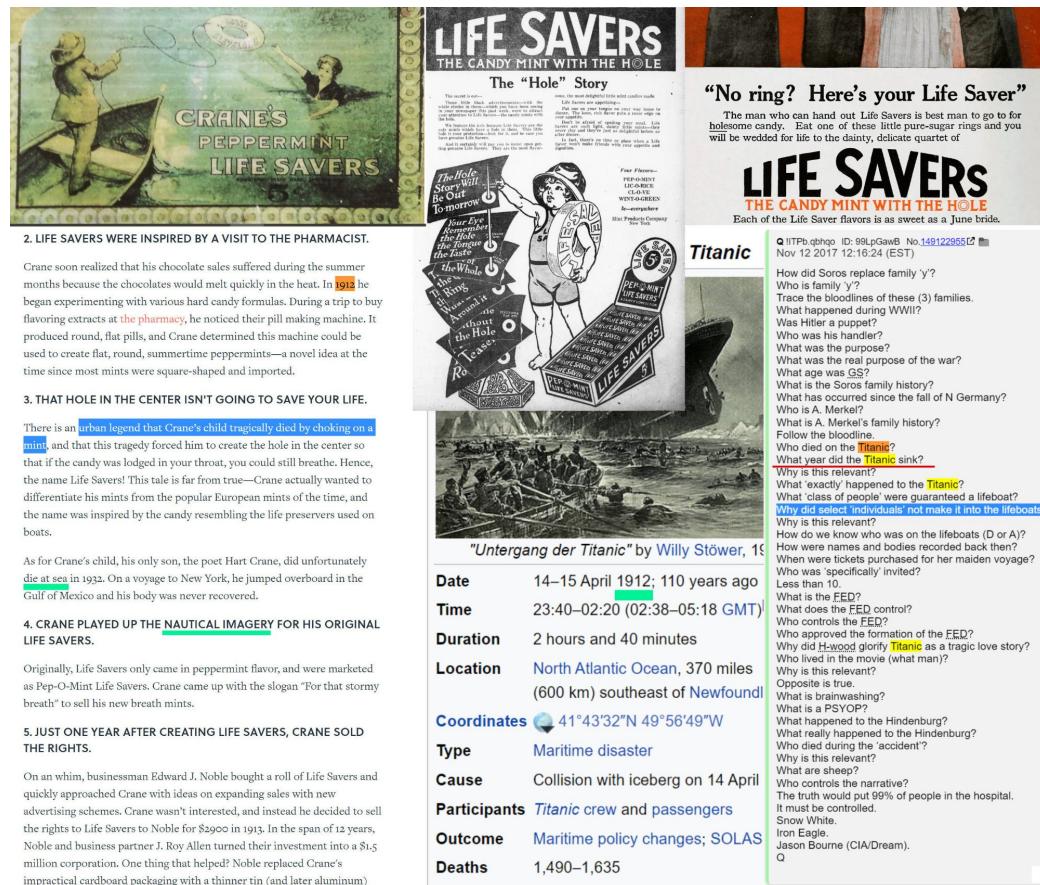

Cameron, a Scottish-born American psychiatrist, did hold all those titles at various points in his career, and he was the first director of the Allan.

What wasn't known, until many years later, was that Cameron's reputation also came to the attention of the CIA. They were interested in his psychiatric research that involved extreme sensory deprivation, drugs, and an intense repetition of recorded messages.

Three years after the CIA launched MK-ULTRA, they approached Cameron through the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology, a research foundation and one of their front organizations through which they funnelled money. They encouraged him to apply for a grant, which he did, and quickly received. From January 1957 to September 1960, the CIA gave Cameron $60,000 US, equivalent to slightly more than $500,000 today.

That might be a coincidence, but I'll tell you what isn't.

2. LIFE SAVERS WERE INSPIRED BY A VISIT TO THE PHARMACIST.

Crane soon realized that his chocolate sales suffered during the summer months because the chocolates would melt quickly in the heat. In 1912 he began experimenting with various hard candy formulas. During a trip to buy flavoring extracts at the pharmacy, he noticed their pill making machine. It produced round, flat pills, and Crane determined this machine could be used to create flat, round, summertime peppermints—a novel idea at the time since most mints were square-shaped and imported.

3. THAT HOLE IN THE CENTER ISN'T GOING TO SAVE YOUR LIFE.

There is an urban legend that Crane's child tragically died by choking on a mint, and that this tragedy forced him to create the hole in the center so that if the candy was lodged in your throat, you could still breathe. Hence, the name Life Savers! This tale is far from true—Crane actually wanted to differentiate his mints from the popular European mints of the time, and the name was inspired by the candy resembling the life preservers used on boats.

As for Crane's child, his only son, the poet Hart Crane, did unfortunately die at sea in 1932. On a voyage to New York, he jumped overboard in the Gulf of Mexico and his body was never recovered.

4. CRANE PLAYED UP THE NAUTICAL IMAGERY FOR HIS ORIGINAL LIFE SAVERS.

Originally, Life Savers only came in peppermint flavor, and were marketed as Pep-O-Mint Life Savers. Crane came up with the slogan "For that stormy breath" to sell his new breath mints.

5. JUST ONE YEAR AFTER CREATING LIFE SAVERS, CRANE SOLD THE RIGHTS.

On an whim, businessman Edward J. Noble bought a roll of Life Savers and quickly approached Crane with ideas on expanding sales with new advertising schemes. Crane wasn't interested, and instead he decided to sell the rights to Life Savers to Noble for $2900 in 1913. In the span of 12 years, Noble and business partner J. Roy Allen turned their investment into a $1.5 million corporation. One thing that helped? Noble replaced Crane's impractical cardboard packaging with a thinner tin (and later aluminum).

Life Savers were introduced in 1912.

Nautical symbol and the original story even involves a story of dying at sea, and most importantly the whole story of Titanic is tied to a rush for lifeboats. The symbol of "Life Saver" as it says!

How do you get a Life Saver? By cooperating WITH THE MINT!

Reserve Banks purchase coin at face value from the Mint.

By making the original life savers MINT it even carries the symbol of how to save your own life. This would have made the candy a literal threat when introduced and helps clarify why they passed the bill and sold out the country.

But that's not the only product. That's the symbol of the saved, what about the symbol of the sinking?

That'd be Oreos. Also 1912 and with the ICEBERG in the middle. You DUNK IT IN MILK. Symbol forever married to the origin.

Do a bit of your own research on that novel and you'll see more and more that verifies this. Check my Titanic post for a lot more as well, but let's get back to "Nuclear"

You can surely understand why now Titanic could be classified as a "Nuclear Submarine" It was already damaged on launch and if people learned the truth about the Federal Reserve they would rise against it.

Most "nuclear" is likely tied to blackmail, and if everyone was on the same side there would be no need to blackmail, there are clearly forces in conflict.

For example... Why did the media turn against Nixon? Nixon had a 49 state landslide victory and then divebombed to the bottom of popularity. Is it just that he was a criminal caught? Or like most things is there a lot more going on underneath?

In the past 7 years, there has been an average of one international monetary crisis every year. Now who gains from these crises? Not the workingman; not the investor; not the real producers of wealth. The gainers are the international money speculators. Because they thrive on crises, they help to create them.

In recent weeks, the speculators have been waging an all-out war on the American dollar. The strength of a nation's currency is based on the strength of that nation's economy — and the American economy is by far

A nation's currency is based on the strength of that nation's economy — and the American economy is by far the strongest in the world. Accordingly, I have directed the Secretary of the Treasury to take the action necessary to defend the dollar against the speculators.

I have directed Secretary Connally to suspend temporarily the convertibility of the American dollar except in amounts and conditions determined to be in the interest of monetary stability and in the best interests of the United States.

Now, this action will not win us any friends among the international money traders. But our primary concern is with the American workers, and with fair competition around the world.

1976 Tangshan earthquake

Natural Disaster

The 1976 Tangshan earthquake, also known as the Great Tangshan earthquake, was a natural disaster resulting from a magnitude 7.6 earthquake that hit the region around Tangshan, Hebei, People's Republic of China on 28 July 1976, at 3:42 in the morning. The maximum intensity of the earthquake was XI on the Mercalli scale. In minutes, eighty-five percent of the buildings in Tangshan collapsed or were unusable, all services failed, and most of the highway and railway bridges collapsed or were seriously damaged. At least 242,000 people died, making this the third deadliest earthquake in recorded history. The lack of warning and foreshocks, in contrast to the earlier 1975 Haicheng earthquake, was a principal factor in the large number of casualties.

found herself at odds with other top leaders. Mao's death in 1976 dealt a significant blow to Jiang's political fortunes. She was arrested in October 1976 by Hua Guofeng and his allies, and was subsequently condemned by party authorities. Since then, Jiang has been officially branded as having been part of the "Lin Biao and Jiang Qing Counter-Revolutionary Cliques"<sup>[1]</sup> (林彪江青反革命集团), to which most of the blame for the damage and devastation caused by the Cultural Revolution was assigned. Though she was initially sentenced to death, her sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in 1983. After being released for medical treatment, Jiang died by suicide in May 1991.<sup>[2][3]</sup>

THE OPENING OF CHINA

President Nixon journeyed on an historic trip to China, meeting with Chairman Mao and Premier Chou En-lai, and suffered two major heart attacks, one in March and another in July, then a third on September 5, rendering him an invalid. He died nearly four days later, at 00:10 on September 9, 1976, at the age of 82. The Communist Party delayed the announcement of his death until 16:00 when a national radio broadcast announced the news and appealed for party unity.<sup>[254]</sup>

"Coincidentally" just after Nixon resigned from scandal China had a massive earthquake.

It killed 242,000 people and Mao was soon found dead. Then his wife and supporters were arrested in a military coup.

Note above on the bottom right as I highlighted the 49-state win of Nixon. His popularity was record-breaking and then collapsed.

I'm not saying Mao and Nixon were necessarily good or evil but they seemed to have become allies and then were quickly destroyed.

This ability to overthrow countries that step out of line is an important one. It ties into why things are being fixed.

COVID & Biden

Now I'll share a better example than any above. A set of "gaffes" by Biden that unlock something important.

- 09/26/2020 Joe Biden: 'I Got to the Senate 180 Years Ago'
- +180 Days = 03/25/2021
- 03/25/2021 Joe Biden: 'When I came to the U.S. Senate 120 years ago'

What are the odds of that? He makes a gaffe of "180 years ago I got to the senate" and then EXACTLY 180 days later he makes the exact same gaffe of when he got to the senate but this time 120 years instead of 180 years.

Know what would make it even stranger? If it happened a third time!

BIDEN: "I believe we should go back to a position of a filibuster that existed just when I came to the United States Senate 120 years ago."

Days between March 25th 2021 and July 23rd 2021?

120 days

- +120 Days = 07/23/2021
- 07/22/2021 Joe Biden: "Way back 150 years ago when I was chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Can you think of any possible way for this to not be intentional?

It begs the question of why. This is where context is key. It doesn't just line up to his other gaffes it lines up perfectly to 2 different Olympic Games!

What did that final countdown lead to? I'll share the answer to those questions soon but we are now getting into tricky territory where I have to explain the motives of the major players.

How much do you know about the most powerful people in the world? One of the major hurdles to decode is proper context and so if you are incapable of viewing Joe Biden or Donald Trump as anything other than a Devil or Angel I'm afraid what I do here may be lost on you. I'm not in the business of projecting my expectations, I'm trying to find the truth.

The truth is that there has been a global military operation going on across the world for the past few years. This is the reason for the countdown above and why it's tied to the OLYMPICS IN CHINA.

Know what else is tied to the Olympics in China?

Notice that the United States and China and every other major military in the world got together in Wuhan. Which just so happens to be the same place COVID began exactly 30 days (1 month) later!

Event 201 is the fourth such exercise hosted by the Johns Hopkins center, which works to prepare communities for biological threats, pandemics, and other disasters. The simulations started with 2001's Dark Winter, which gathered national security experts for its simulated smallpox outbreak. The groundbreaking event turned out to be influential in shaping U.S. efforts around pandemic preparedness—particularly due to its timing, right before 9/11.

"Dark Winter resulted in more than a dozen congressional hearings, was briefed to the White House, and ultimately influenced the decision to stockpile enough smallpox vaccine for all Americans," Inglesby says.

Dr. Charles Lieber
According to court documents, since 2008, Dr. Lieber who has served as the Principal Investigator of the Lieber Research Group at Harvard University, which specialized in the area of nanoscience, has received more than $15,000,000 in grant funding from the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and Department of Defense (DOD). These grants require the disclosure of significant foreign financial conflicts of interest, including financial support from foreign governments or foreign entities. Unbeknownst to Harvard University beginning in 2011, Lieber became a "Strategic Scientist" at Wuhan University of Technology (WUT) in China and was a contractual participant in China's Thousand Talents Plan from in or about 2012 to 2017. China's Thousand Talents Plan is one of the most prominent Chinese Talent recruit plans that are designed to attract, recruit, and cultivate high-level scientific talent in furtherance of China's scientific development, economic prosperity and national security. These talent programs seek to lure Chinese overseas talent and foreign experts to bring their knowledge and experience to China and reward individuals for stealing proprietary information. Under the terms of Lieber's three-year Thousand Talents contract, WUT paid Lieber $50,000 USD per month, living expenses of up to 1,000,000 Chinese Yuan (approximately $158,000 USD at the time) and awarded him more than $1.5 million to establish a research lab at WUT. In return, Lieber was obligated to work for WUT "not less than nine months a year" by "declaring international cooperation projects, cultivating young teachers and Ph.D. students, organizing international conference(s), applying for patents and publishing articles in the name of" WUT.

Why you can trust SCMP

The first case of someone in China suffering from Covid-19, the disease caused by the novel coronavirus, can be traced back to November 17, according to government data seen by the South China Morning Post.

Chinese authorities have so far identified at least 266 people who were infected last year, all of whom came under medical surveillance at some point.

Witches executed 300 years ago to be posthumously pardoned

Thousands of people, mostly women and girls, who were accused of witchcraft in Scotland hundreds of years ago are set to be pardoned following a two-year long campaign by the Witches of Scotland activist group.

The women's alleged crimes were reportedly as varied as causing hangovers to meeting with the Devil, and more than half of those accused under the Witchcraft Act between 1563 and 1736 were executed. According to estimates cited by the Sunday Times, some 85% of the victims were female.

slaves. As part of the Afghan tradition of bacha bazi, literally “boy play,” boys as young as 9 are dressed as girls and trained to dance for male audiences, then prostituted in an auction to the highest bidder. Many powerful men, particularly commanders in the military and the police, keep such boys, often dressed in uniforms, as constant companions for sexual purposes.

Quivering with quiet rage, Shirin holds a photo of his teenage brother-in-law, who now lives as the plaything of policemen, just one victim of a hidden epidemic of kidnappings of young boys for institutionalised sexual slavery in Afghanistan. Shirin is among 13 families AFP traced and interviewed across three Afghan provinces who said their children were taken for the pervasive practice of "bacha bazi", or paedophilic exploitation, in Western-backed security forces. Their testimonies shine a rare spotlight on the anguished, solitary struggles to free sons, nephews and cousins from a tradition of culturally-sanctioned enslavement and rape. Shirin recalled how his 13-year-old brother-in-law screamed and writhed as he was taken from his home earlier this year by a police commander in southern Helmand. "When I begged for his release, his men pointed their guns and said: 'Do you want your family to die? Forget your boy,'" Shirin told AFP in Lashkar Gah. "Our boys are openly abducted for bacha bazi. Where should we go for help? The Taliban?" The heart-wrenching stories,

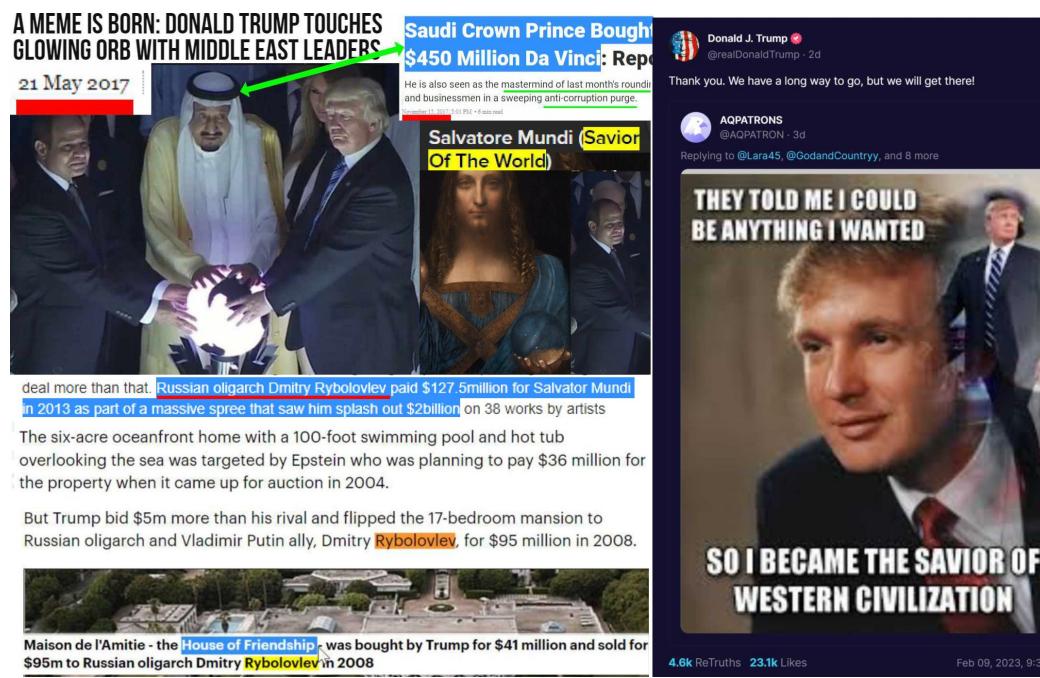

Can you read the stories above and say the US was doing a good job in Afghanistan?

The only thing we can say for certain is that the USA occupied a country and let child abuse run rampant for more than a decade.

If you can't fix things by invading what can you do? A real solution requires a new approach.

This extends to much of the world.

- 2017 Saudi Arabia in terrorism fight with Trump touches Orb
- 2017 Saudi Arabia Prince buys Orb-focused “Savior of the World” from Russian oligarch highest price ever for a painting
- 2017 Saudi Arabia arrests Billionaire Al Waleed in sweeping anti-corruption purge.

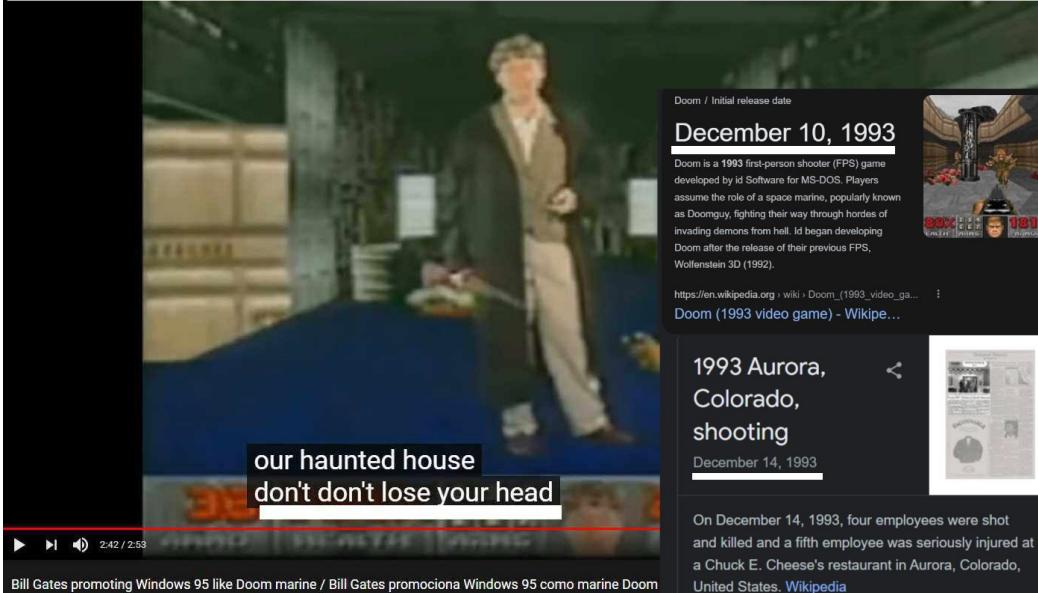

Note how years prior Trump bought a “House of Friendship” from that same exact Russian Oligarch.

The reason for these cleanup ops is because of the world of powerful people is held hostage by threats.

There are two threats I most commonly see referenced in comms. One of which is the blackmail type like the Access Hollywood video. A ready-made scandal waiting if they ever turn. They won't let you have a voice without attaching a string in this way, but that's not the only threat.

The most important threat is the kind provided by MKUltra, a network of hidden cells across the country that can be activated to kill, terrorize, or simply create distractions with news stories. The most famous pieces of media/pop culture are often the markers for these moments. The events are discussed openly using symbolism.

Fast forward to 2004 when he marries Melania and then everything is perfect. There's a lot more to this story of course which I go into in other posts, but the point is to show you how the world was controlled by evil.

The way this evil is utilized is almost impossible to counter-act.

One of the darkest truths of the world is that child sacrifice is real. It's not the absurd adrenochrome or cannibalistic nonsense you are likely to see from disinformation, but a logical methodology.

There are a mountain of so-called "red pills" online like Adrenochrome, but most are disinformation.

I have an entire post here that goes through some of the major ones
<https://decodingsymbols.wordpress.com/2021/03/18/decoding-disinfo/>

There is truth in this world and great secrets to be revealed, but the only way to see it is to learn how to think critically rather than accept whatever nonsense is being pushed.

I lay out the truth as I see it. I'm not always right, but you will see a difference like night and day between that pile of red pills meant to give you an overdose of nonsense and what I do. You'll realize that many of those disinfo pushes exist to keep you from seeing what I present. My work can even prove at times what is and is not disinformation because the people creating disinformation use these same symbolism comms to coordinate!

As I was saying. Child Sacrifice is real.

programs like MKULTRA, torture training through their Office of Public Safety, and massive research in and use of chemical and biological warfare (begun in Operation NKNAOMI) were the backbone of CIA and Pentagon covert activities over the last 40 years. Torture, crude and sophisticated, was exported to client states in Latin America, Africa, Asia, and elsewhere.

Big money + Enemies + a desire to never go to jail is why MK exists.

it's a way for the rich to hire killers and other mayhem. For the perpetrators, it's a voluntary system! The perpetrators take on 100% of any risk.

For many on the lower end It's a way to move up in the world for them. They sacrifice one of their children to create an asset to be used by the rich. If successful, the rich that desired the ops gifts them. Not directly, but this is where it pays for all the companies to be connected. There's a million ways to fund it. And not just with money, but fame and power.

They already proved their loyalty after all thru the sacrifice. That's how you get your foot into the door of the most exclusive club in the world!

Let me say that again: The rich that finance MK into action DO NOT HAVE DIRECT TIES TO MK.

The records "rewrite the history" of the CIA's covert and illegal MKUltra project, according to researcher John Greenwald Jr who spent almost 20 years trying to obtain the documents carrying out the experiments,

according to experts

Or as Q put it: Non_Stick.

Families take it upon themselves to MKUltra their kids, they know the richest people in the world want brainwashed killers. It's the law of supply and demand. If the rich want that combination of murder on demand + no risk to themselves... they have to pay a heck of a lot to get it.

MK ops are self-contained bubbles built specifically to avoid liability by making it so that the brainwashed is the one that makes the decisions. They think they choose the target, they think they choose the day. Just like Jason Bourne.

You sent me to kill Wombosi. Kill Wombosi? We can do that anytime we want. I can send Nicky to do that, for Christ's sake. Mr. Wombosi was supposed to be dead three weeks ago. He was supposed to have died in a way where the only possible explanation was... that he'd been murdered by a member of his own entourage. I don't send you to kill. I send you to be invisible. I send you because you don't exist. I want to know what happened in Marseilles. I don't remember what happened in Marseilles. Bullshit! This is unacceptable, Soldier. You hear me? You failed. Unacceptable? You failed! You failed, and you're gonna tell me why. I can't tell you. I don't re-- You brought John Michael Kane to life. You put together a meeting with Wombosi. You found the security company. You broke into the office. You're the one who picked the yacht as the strike point. You picked the boat. You picked the day. You tracked the crew, the food, the fuel. You told us where. You told us when. [ Girl Giggling ] You hid out on that boat five days. You were in, Jason. You were in. It was over.	Yeah, we just heard. It's him. It's Bourne. We're almost positive. He had an assignment. He failed. He obviously felt compelled to finish the task. Shit. Jesus. We think he'll come back in now. I mean, it's routine. It's like behavioral software. He's following a protocol. Now that he's completed the mission, we think he'll come back in. They always do. When? How long till he checks in? Twenty-four hours. Twenty-four hours? Yeah. It's usually something like that. Then what? I told you we'd clean this up. It will be clean.	His mind is broken. We broke it. And now... What now? Terminate him? You've been pushing that agenda

And just like Jason Bourne he "chooses" because he is programmed with a broken mind to do so.

This system is finally being dismantled.

The programmed violent mobs are being dismantled as well.

... Taylor Swift can't contain her excitement over a cover of her hit song "Look What You Made Me Do" being featured in a recent episode of Killing Eve.

The 30-year-old pop star took to Twitter on Sunday (May 24) to share a snippet of the dark and haunting take on her 2017 Reputation track, which was debuted that same evening during the BBC spy drama.

"Very stoked about this cover of Iwymmd on @KillingEve by Jack leopards & the dolphin club!!" Swift tweeted.

First thing they needed to set this in motion was a plant, that'd be Derek Chauvin. Note he was the officer in command and he was training new officers on the scene.

Murder of George Floyd - Wikipedia

Chauvin was the superior officer responsible for the majority of Kueng's field training. On May 3, 2020, video of an arrest incident in Minneapolis showed Chauvin, Kueng, Lane, and another officer roughly detaining a man on the ground as bystanders pleaded for the officers to show mercy.

This is why as Chauvin broke regulation after regulation the other officers did nothing to reign him in.

But it takes much more than that to set up an op like this.

An op like this required extensive schedule coordination as well as awareness of the victim. That's why the perpetrator and victim were co-workers.

STREET FIGHTING MAN

Released August 1968 (US)

Everywhere I hear the sound of marching, charging feet, boy
'Cause summer's here and the time is right for fighting in the street, boy

In the US, this was released as a single on August 31, 1968, just a few days after the Democratic National Convention, which took place August 26-29. The convention was marred by violence, as Chicago police clashed with protesters. When the song was released, every radio station in Chicago (and most in the rest of the country), refused to play it for fear that it would incite more violence. There was no official ban in America or Chicago, but stations knew it was in their best interest to shun the song, which accounts for its meager chart position of #48.

Mick Jagger later said: "The radio stations that banned the song told me that 'Street Fighting Man' was subversive. 'Of course it's subversive,' we said. It's stupid to think you can start a revolution with a record. I wish you could!"

Rolling Stones: "Street Fighting Man" Lyrics: "the time is right for fighting in the street, boy"

A song that tells the listener to go out in the streets and fight over the Vietnam war, and it was released exactly as that was happening all over the country. Couldn't be played due to inciting VIOLENCE IN THE STREET.

Elon Musk is the richest man alive, but he doesn't necessarily live like it. His partner Grimes recently opened up about life with the Tesla CEO. According to the singer/songwriter, Musk loves spending money on his professional and scientific projects. But his personal life is not what you'd expect. Grimes claims he lives as though he's desperate for another paycheck.

What does it mean to have the title of richest? What do they do with that wealth? Is it some kind of giant Scrooge McDuck tower situation filled with gold or is there an actual purpose to it?

Why did his money skyrocket so dramatically around 2020?

Net worth of Elon Musk from 2012 to 2021

I'm not market savvy enough to give you the business answer to how his money grew, but I believe I know a secret reason for it.

I believe his sudden skyrocket in wealth is because he is an important cog in a global revolution going on right now. This might be why he has chosen to live modestly despite his wealth as the goal isn't his own standard of living but others.

Do you know how many thousands of satellites are in the sky?

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Starlink>

Starlink - Wikipedia

As of September 2022, Starlink consists of over 3,000 mass-produced small satellites in low Earth orbit (LEO), which communicate with designated ground transceivers. In total, nearly 12,000 satellites are planned to be deployed, with a possible later extension to 42,000.

Just one of Elon Musk's many projects placed over 3k of them in orbit.

This repetition is to be expected as it's an amazing technology, yet it also serves to highlight the exception.

This is the case for all important milestones of mankind.

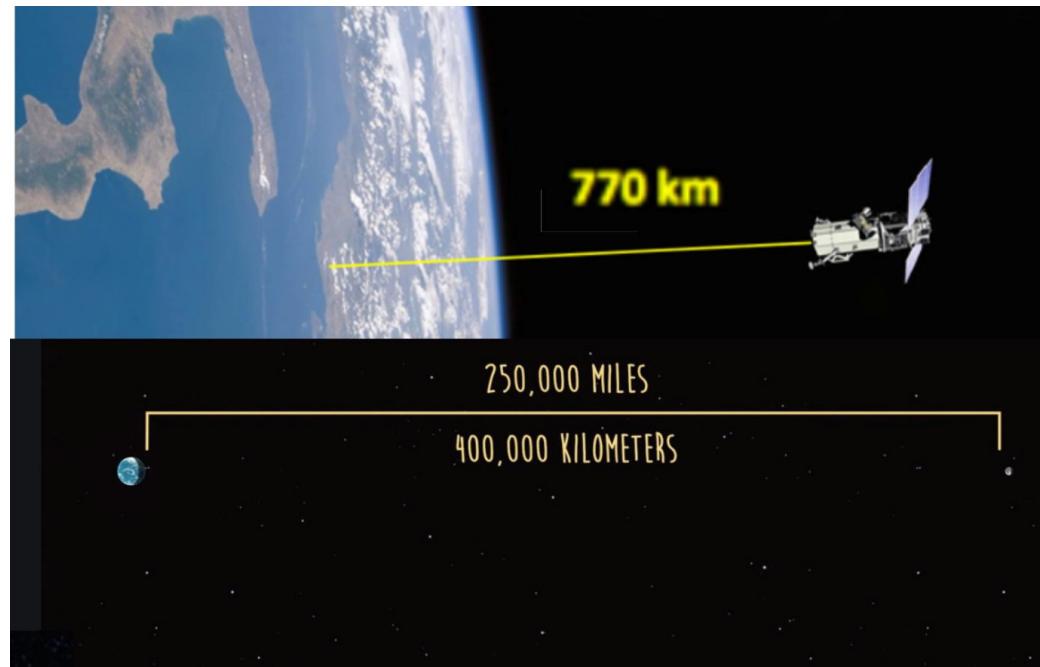

- 40 years after Columbus landed on America? Thousands had followed
- 40 years after the first Transatlantic flight in 1919? Thousands had followed.
- 40 years after the first Satellite Shot in space 1957? Thousands had followed.

And yet.... 50 years after man walks on the moon? No person or country has followed, nor even attempted to launch.

I'm not saying the Moon landings are fake I'm just bringing up how strange it is.

Do you know the distance of a satellite to Earth? Do you know the distance to the moon?

That's an incredible difference.

1. 150 Miles Above Earth = 1961 Mercury Orbit Shuttle Launches
2. 205 Miles Above Earth = 1998-2020 ISS Orbit Launches
3. 250 Miles Above Earth = 1972-2011 The Space-shuttle Orbit Launches
4. 252,088 Miles Beyond Earth = 1969 Apollo Saturn Launches

The official story is that in 1969 Nasa managed to go 100,000 percent further than the space shuttle ever went.

100,000 Percent Increase! Is that a normal advancement?

In the hope that its involvement would bring about greater public interest in the future of the space program, von Braun also began working with Walt Disney and the Disney studios as a technical director, initially for three television films about space exploration. The initial broadcast devoted to space exploration was Man in Space, which first went on air on March 9, 1955, drawing 40 million viewers [61][70][71]

Mars, von Braun had written a science fiction novel on the subject,

A project led by a famous Nazi and marketed to the country as an investment by Disney.

It's not just the distance but the fact that they were able to launch a rocket from the moon itself. Able to launch WITHOUT A LAUNCH PAD.

It's not a helicopter.

The moon is 1/4 the size of earth but even with less gravity why would a tower suddenly be unnecessary?

I once saw a press conference with one member of the press asking how they managed it all. The answer? "the computer did it"

- 1961 Mercury Orbit Shuttle Launches: 150 Miles Above Earth = 1961
- 1998-2020 ISS Orbit Launches 20% Improvement 205 Miles Above Earth
- 1972-2011 Space-shuttle Orbit Launches 2 250 Miles Above Earth = 20% Improvement

- 1969 Apollo Saturn Launches: 252,088 Miles Above Earth
= 200,000% Improvement!

I'm not saying it's fake mind you, just bringing up the incredible feat of increasing 200,000% when all measured improvements were to that point fractional.

Symbolism comms are going to be the best guide on what is real and fake, so what kind of comms were sent around the same time as the Moon Landing prep?

problems began to impact the program. Some 40 medical and scientific experiments and photographic projects also were completed in the 10 manned Gemini missions.

Gemini costs totaled $1.29 billion: $790.4 million for spacecraft, $417.4 million for launch vehicles, and $82.3 million for program support.

Did you know that shortly before Apollo, NASA launched the Tetra-A Satellite to simulate moon transmissions to rehearse "landings" (but also never know what data were being sent to them). Coincidentally NASA claimed it "accidentally burned up" in Earth's atmosphere just before Apollo 11.

In the late 1960s our simulation technology had progressed to the point where it became virtually impossible to separate the training from actual missions. The simulations became full dress rehearsals for the missions down to the smallest detail. The simulation tested out the crew's and controller's responses to normal and emergency conditions. It checked out the exact flight plan, mission rules, and procedures that the crew and controllers would use for a later flight.

Figure 17: Failure is not an Option by Gene Kranz who testifies that the MCC simulations could be foiled by simulated data and thus need not be on the same level as the real mission. The book is a must-read for anyone like who worked on individual components, and manufactured and tested these components to NASA's specifications. One company built the spacesuit to NASA's specifications; one built the cooling system to NASA's specifications; another supplied engines and so forth. The only people seeing the full picture were the very senior individuals in possession of the full picture.

Due to the realism of the practice simulations and the way data was handled between the MSFN and MCC, there is an argument to be made that the MCC technicians could be fooled by simulated data and thus need not be on the same level as the real mission. The book is a must-read for anyone like who worked on individual components, and manufactured and tested these components to NASA's specifications. One company built the spacesuit to NASA's specifications; one built the cooling system to NASA's specifications; another supplied engines and so forth. An incident in the Mercury project puts into perspective just how departmentalized NASA is. The first unmanned orbital mission was Big Joe 1, a boilerplate test. The launch vehicle intended to send the Mercury spacecraft into orbit was the Atlas D. However, when the two vehicles arrived to be mated, it was discovered that the Mercury wouldn't fit atop the Atlas rocket. NASA engineer Scott Simpson had to resort to taking half an inch off the heatshield's thickness with an angle grinder! [D. Cadbury, 2006].

Project Echo was the first passive communications satellite experiment. Each of the two American spacecraft, launched in 1960 and 1964, were metalized balloon satellites acting as passive reflectors of microwave signals. Communication signals were transmitted from one location on Earth and bounced off the surface of the satellite to another Earth location.<sup>[1]</sup>

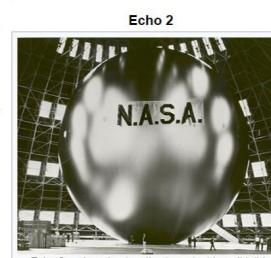

The first transmissions using Echo were sent from Goldstone, California to Holmdel, New Jersey on 12 August 1960. The last Echo satellite deorbited and burned up in the atmosphere on 7 June 1969.<sup>[2]</sup>

Apollo flight director: "The simulations were so real no controller could discern the difference between the training and the real mission". A retired ground-crew member: "Our computers could not tell any difference between a real or simulated mission to the moon"

That's not a conspiracy book, that's official history by the people involved. It tells explicitly that no personnel at Mission Control could tell the difference between a simulation and real mission. The satellite existed so that 99.9 percent of NASA employees would view the data from a satellite they pretended was dead as the real thing.

Also notice the same day they launched the satellite for the scam to create the most famous boot print on the moon.... just so happened to be the same day Nike was founded. The most famous shoemaker in the world.

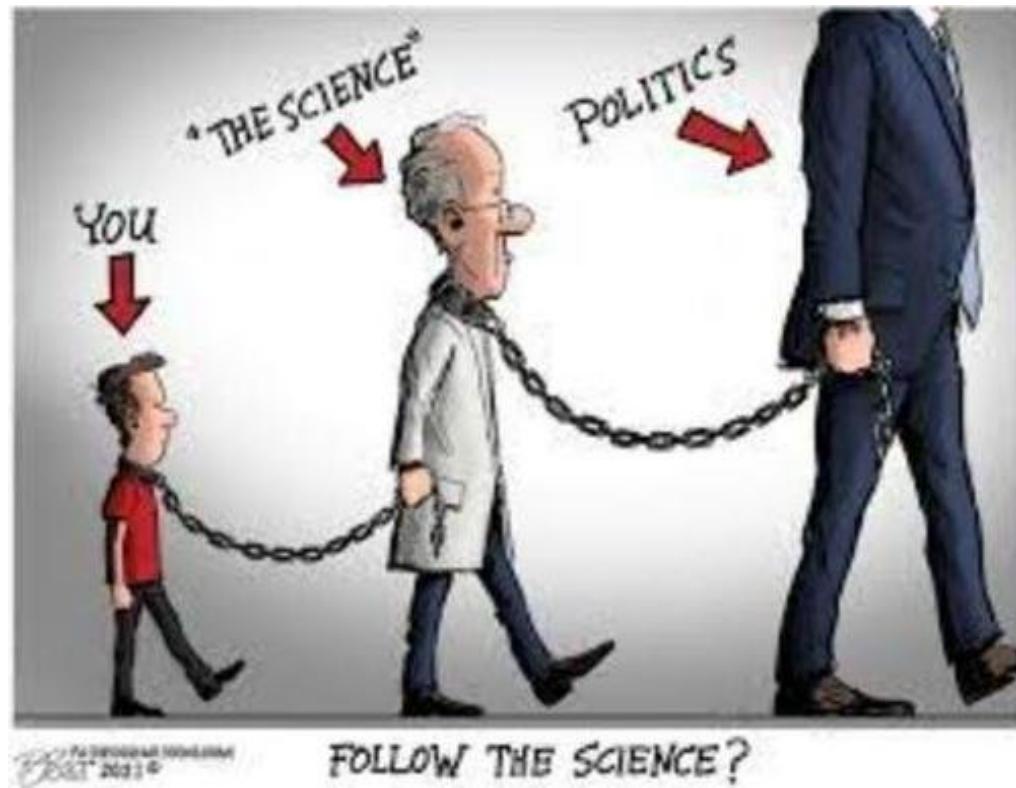

This is the power of compartmentalization combined with comms.

It goes a long way to explaining Musk's role in things as the massive funding has to go somewhere.

Contracting to smaller companies = ops of any kind or at any place being funded – that's the principle while they oversee it.

Science & "Science"

Scientists are presented as smarter than the average viewer. We are meant to trust them and their findings for this reason. However... even if people are smarter than you, how can you know they have an honest motive?

People don't typically question Science. The irony is that questioning Science IS SCIENCE.

When you learn comms you realize the path forwards is not in trusting someone else, but in developing critical thinking and then trusting yourself.

The Narrative

Report Hyped By Climate Alarmists Warned: Millions Dead, Nuclear War, & Sunken Major Cities By 2020

Authored by Paul Joseph Watson via Summit News.

According to experts, climate change will result in "millions" of deaths, major European cities being sunken, nuclear war and global environmental riots...all within the next 5 days.

Dozens Of Failed Climate Predictions Stretch 80 Years Back

Authored by Peter Svab via The Epoch Times.

Apocalyptic climate and environmental catastrophes of global proportions have decimated the world many times recent decades - at least based on dozens of predictions made by various scientists, experts, and officials over years.

Arctic Meltdown

"All the glaciers in Eastern Greenland are rapidly melting," the Harrisburg [Pennsylvania] Sunday Courier reported on Dec. 17, 1939.

Between 1930 and 1940, numerous predictions were issued by the Department of Agriculture, geologists, mining experts, doctors and drinking water well sterilizing agents to cut the growing population of the United States, according to the report.

Ehrlich was on fire by 1970, getting two dozen speaking requests per day and predicting that America would be rationing water by 1974

But around the same time, a new prognosis was on the horizon.

Global Cooling

"Scientist predicts a new ice age by 21st century," The Boston Globe reported on Apr. 16, 1970, saying that pollution expert James Lodge predicted that "air pollution may obliterate the sun and cause a new ice age in the first third of the new century."

- 1939-1970 Global Warming! Glaciers are melting!
- 1970-1981 Global Cooling! Everything will be a Glacier!
- 1981-2019 Climate Change! Glaciers may or may not be melting! But either way it's an emergency!

They count on people having goldfish memory.

Clearly, there is dishonesty in some sectors of professional science, and you might be inclined to reject it all, but that's no good either.

If you go too far you end up in a fantasy world with no tether to reality.

Not long ago you could find videos on YouTube with millions of views promoting baby eating as the one true great secret of the world.

Do these images make you cringe?

They make me cringe because I know this is how anyone that rejects the narrative is meant to view the world. It is the world, but only according to the handful of conspiracy theorists that are allowed to spread their message.

It's a bit of an oxymoron in that these conspiracy theories proclaim an evil force controlling the world and yet somehow with all that power they can't stop people from exposing them. If there is a figure controlling the internet this perception of you viewing them as monsters is what is desired for those that stray from the mainstream media path.

There are forces in this world that want you to stop looking at famous people as human beings but as amorphous monsters. The less defined you can be the better, the more monstrous they seem the better. These blind prophets become their own kryptonite as they embrace an insanity not so dissimilar from the kind they see in the celebrities they obsess over. There are so many fake rabbit holes dug up and they are almost always akin to giant flashing neon lights trying to attract attention. They are carefully built to destroy the truth by taking a small part of the truth and then attaching insanity so as to make anyone that agrees with him look insane. A deception with several layers. This is the truth of Alex Jones.

Talking about eating babies, and goblins and how Obama literally smells like garbage. See how it works? That's why he got the big views from the right – the "approved opposition" this is why he is allowed to cover taboo subjects because he is giving you the talking points for them. Bringing up subjects you would be outraged about but then putting on a funny dance so that anyone you talk to it about will be repelled.

I hope by now you can see the difference in what I do relative to what those people are doing.

You can't go that far lest you run off the cliff of insanity, but you do at times need to move from the place the narrative wants you.

If you don't move you risk being a robot that accepts every narrative as gospel.

Ford Model T

The Ford Model T is an automobile produced by Ford Motor Company from October 1, 1908, to May 26, 1927. It is generally regarded as the first affordable automobile, which made car travel available to middle-class Americans. Wikipedia

The Model T was actually affordable and it became so popular at one point that a majority of Americans owned one, directly helping rural Americans become more connected with the rest of the country and leading to the numbered highway system. The manufacturing

Model-A was when they had a T-Rex partial skeleton, and Model-T was when they had a finished skeleton.

The reason they needed to send comms about it is clear when you understand the history.

The Model-T ushered in a revolution in assembly, and it became the King of production.

1. King of the assembly line. The Model T brought mobility and prosperity on an undreamed of scale through manufacturing efficiencies at a price that anyone could afford. The moving assembly line created the mass-production process, which influenced the “machine age.” It also enabled Ford to steadily decrease the price of the Model T. In 1908, the first Model Ts sold for $825. By 1925, the vehicles sold for only $260.

2. Friend of the factory worker. The Model T was responsible for establishing a minimum wage and the eight-hour workday. The $5 a day minimum wage (created in early 1914 at Ford's Highland Park, MI, factory) is often cited as having helped establish the middle-class. The factory work also gave jobs to people who usually could not find work, such as immigrants, women and minorities.

Note the establishment of the middle class as that'll be important later, but the point, for now, let's just look at history connecting the two.

Who found the T-Rex? That'd be a guy named after a circus showman famous for frauds. Barnum Brown who was a CORPORATE SPY FOR OIL COMPANIES.

Named after the circus showman P. T. Barnum, he discovered the first documented remains of Tyrannosaurus during a career that made him one of the most famous fossil hunters working from the late Victorian era into the early 20th century.

Barnum was quite a colorful character. During World War I and II, he worked as a "intelligence asset". In addition, he picked up some spare cash acting as a corporate spy for oil companies, during his many trips abroad. During his time in Canada, Barnum was frequently photographed wearing a large fur coat at dig sites.

The glitter of Barnum Brown's celebrity star has dimmed considerably during the forty-five years since his death and the century since he resurrected Tyrannosaurus rex from the daunting badlands of the Hell Creek Formation in Montana. In the mid-twentieth century, however, Brown—known by his adoring admirers as "Mr. Bones"—was one of the most famous scientists in the world. People would flock to the train station when he arrived in the field to collect dinosaur fossils, vying for the right to drive him to his hotel or camp. Thousands of other aficionados would gather around the radio to listen live to his tales from the field about the latest exploits and adventures on his decades-long quest for dinosaurs. In a sense, he became every bit as legendary as the dinosaurs he discovered. Then as today, Brown was recognized as the greatest dinosaur collector of all time. There is no question that he counterclaims in the press and halls of government as they competed for funding and dominance over the agencies that controlled the nation's geological resources. Politically, Marsh gained the upper hand by becoming the chief paleontologist for the United States Geological Survey in 1882, which allowed him to control government funding and field access for his operations throughout the next decade. Marsh also served as president of the

P.T. Barnum's Greatest Hoaxes

The Feejee Mermaid

The first to exhibit a 'real' mermaid was likely American sailor Captain Barret Fades, who sold his skin in exchange for the body of a mermaid.

There are countless fakes from this era reported by newspapers as real right alongside dinosaur bones and Martian rivers.

Given Barnum was a documented spy for the oil industry.... obviously cars = oil and so there's a connected interest there to send comms for it right?

Look how close this is.

- 10/01/1908 Model T Released (First Assembly built full production)

The building of the "skeletons" was an important concept, the way comms work is by hiding the truth in plain sight.

They couldn't say that the Model-T mass production plants were ready, so they gave little updates using the completeness of dinosaur skeletons to explain!

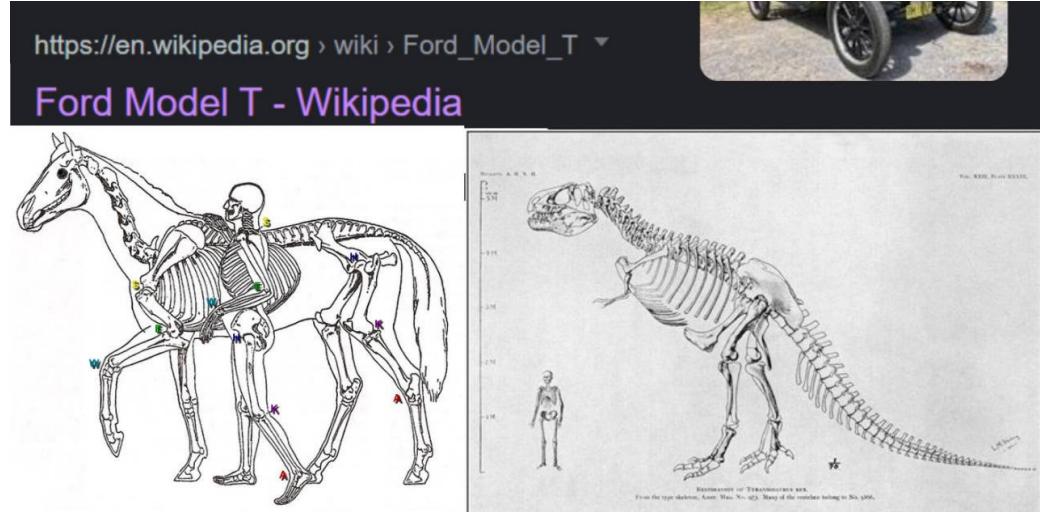

- 1902: First T-Rex Partial Body Found
- 1902: Model-T Predecessor built by HENRY FORD (PARTIAL BODY)

In 1902 it wasn't ready yet but in 1908 when mass production was ready? That's when it was done! Furthermore, the animal itself is symbolic.

Is the Ford Model T rear-wheel drive?

The Model T is a rear-wheel drive vehicle. Its transmission is a planetary gear type billed as "three speed." In today's terms it is considered a two-speed, because one of the three speeds is reverse.

Remember that back then Model-T's are what replaced HORSES, and so the symbolism gave the relative power differences between a horse and the Model-T – complete with the fact that it had giant rear legs but no front legs. I.e. rear-wheel drive only but WAY MORE POWER!

The giant teeth of the T-Rex symbolize that it would EAT THE HORSES (which it did as cars made horses obsolete in 99% of society)

When you know this connection you can find many winks to it, for example, the relative speeds.

Horses being 8-10 mph but how fast is T-Rex?

At a trot, a horse-drawn carriage will go around 8-10 MPH. At a walk, a horse-drawn carriage will go about 2-4 MPH. The speed of a carriage depends on the weather, terrain, horse, and other tractors. Generally, horses do not canter or gallop with a carriage. Sep 19, 2021

The engine was simple and efficient, with all four cylinders cast in a single block and the cylinder head detachable for easy access and repair. The engine generated 20 horsepower and propelled the car to modest top speeds of 40-45 miles per hour (65-70 km/h).

<https://www.britannica.com> > technology > Model-T

45 mph! same exact speed as the Model-T!

The reason it was given “T-Rex” as a name in 1905 was likely because it was a signal that the Model-T was going to be when they had decided to go full production, which equated to 1908. So anyone with comms awareness who knew the Model they were on could just do a bit of math to see when the fireworks would begin as they all held their breath for the revolution they knew would hit when the plant went full force.

Because of this symbolism of T-Rex with cars, it extends to oil. In fact, that's a famous misconception that was even mistaught in schools. That Fossil fuels came from dinosaurs.

In the summer of 1990, a team of paleontologists from the Black Hills Institute, located in Hill City, searched for fossils at the Cheyenne River Indian Reservation in western South Dakota. By the end of the summer, the group had discovered Edmontosaurus bones and was ready to leave.

When the group was about to depart, a flat tire was discovered on their truck so they decided to go to town the nearby town of Faith to have the truck repaired. One member, Sue Hendrickson, decided to stay though, with the aim to explore the nearby cliffs that the group had not checked.

It took 17 long days and six people to extract all the bones. This Specimen FMNH PR 2081 has been housed inside the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago since May 2020. With a skull that weighs 2,000 pounds plus 58 teeth intact and a height of 42 feet, Sue is easily one of the most popular fossils today. Aug 12, 2021

Scotty is currently the largest Tyrannosaurus specimen ever discovered.

“Scotty” is the nickname for the Tyrannosaurus rex fossil, catalogued as RSM P2523.8, that was discovered in Saskatchewan, Canada in 1991. Since its discovery and extensive subsequent study, “Scotty” has been referred to as the largest T. rex ever discovered in the world, the largest of any dinosaur discovered in Canada, and as one of the oldest and most complete fossils of its kind at more than 70% bulk.<sup>[17]</sup> “Scotty” resides at the Royal Saskatchewan Museum’s T. rex Discovery Centre in Eastend, SK, Canada. In May 2019, a second mount was erected at the Royal Saskatchewan Museum in Regina, where the exhibit reflects the recent discoveries about the fossil.<sup>[18]</sup>

“Scotty” was discovered by Robert Gebhardt, a high school principal from Eastend, SK who accompanied paleontologists from the Royal Saskatchewan Museum on a prospective expedition into the Frenchman Formation in southwestern Saskatchewan on 16 August 1991.<sup>[17]</sup> Although he was only there to learn how to find and identify fossils, Gebhardt uncovered a tooth and tail vertebra that the museum was able to verify belonged to a T. rex.<sup>[19]</sup> Initially, Gebhardt thought that the visible fossil was actually ironstone.<sup>[19]</sup> It wasn’t until June 1994 that the Royal Saskatchewan Museum was able to begin the excavation, which was led and overseen by the Museum’s Ron Borden, as well as resident paleontologists Tim Tokaryk and John Storer who were with Gebhardt when he uncovered the first fossils.<sup>[18][19]</sup> The bones were deeply packed in dense, iron-laden sandstone, which took more than twenty years for the team to fully remove, excavate, and assemble the majority of the skeleton, with additional trips being made to the site to retrieve smaller bones and teeth.<sup>[19][20][11][12]</sup> The entire process of excavating the skeleton was also slowed down by its considerable size.<sup>[17]</sup> The first fossils unearthed were part of the upper body, specifically vertebra, parts of the jaw, and teeth. At the time of its discovery, the fossil was one of only 12 known T. rex skeletons of significant completion.<sup>[17]</sup> The name “Scotty” came from the celebratory bottle of scotch shared by the team that had

Background and design [edit]

The Oil-for-Food Programme was instituted to relieve the extended suffering of civilians as the result of the United Nations’ imposition of comprehensive sanctions on Iraq following Iraq’s invasion of Kuwait in August 1990. Security Council Resolution 706 of 15 August 1991 was introduced to allow the sale of Iraqi oil in exchange for food.<sup>[4]</sup>

Security Council Resolution 712 of 19 September 1991 confirmed that Iraq could sell up to US$1.6 billion in oil to fund an Oil-For-Food Programme.<sup>[5]</sup> After an initial refusal, Iraq signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) in May 1996 for arrangements to be taken to implement that resolution.

The Oil-for-Food Programme started in December 1996, and the first shipments of food arrived in March 1997. Sixty percent of Iraq’s twenty-six million people were solely dependent on rations from the oil-for-food plan.

The programme used an escrow system. Oil exported from Iraq was paid for by the recipient into an escrow account possessed until 2001 by BNP Paribas bank, rather than to the Iraqi government. The money was then apportioned to pay for war reparations to Kuwait, ongoing coalition and United Nations operations within Iraq. The remainder, the majority of the revenue, was available to the Iraqi government to purchase regulated items.

The Iraqi government was permitted to purchase only items that were not embargoed under the economic sanctions. Certain items, such as raw foodstuffs, were expedited for immediate shipment, but requests for most items, including such simple things as pencils and folic acid, were reviewed in a process that typically took six months before shipment was authorized. Items deemed to have any potential application in chemical, biological or nuclear weapons systems development were not available to the regime, regardless of stated purpose.

The motive for some of these in the early days was for stardom/celebrity. The early finders of bones were treated as such. Note in the article above about how people were so enthused about dinosaur discoveries they would treat them like the Beatles and crowd around the guy's train on arrival. It's not a complicated scam. It's just an old one with an obvious set of motives a mile long. Lies that over time have become so ingrained into society the lie can never be called out.

Early on it was a win/win for newspapers and experts as the news story attracts interest and the finder grows famous. It also leads to grants to get tax funding and probably a dozen other boons that only someone from that field could testify to.

Look at these two popular YouTube videos. One about T-Rex the other about Model-T. The titles are interchangeable. It's almost like one was made to symbolize the other! 😊

Remember that the T-Rex guy was named after the most famous hoaxer in history.

The Beatles.

Beatlemania was the fanaticism surrounding the English rock band the Beatles in the 1960s. The group's popularity grew in the United Kingdom throughout 1963, propelled by the singles "Please Please Me", "From Me to You" and "She Loves You". By October, the press adopted the term "Beatlemania" to describe the scenes of adulation that attended the band's concert performances. From the start of 1964, their world tours were characterised by the same levels of hysteria and high-pitched screaming by female fans, both at concerts and during the group's travels. Commentators likened the intensity of this adulation to a religious fervour and to a female masturbation fantasy. Among the displays of deity-like worship, fans would approach the band in the belief that they possessed supernatural healing powers.

Cultural impact of the Beatles

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The English rock band the Beatles are commonly regarded as the foremost and most influential band in popular music history. With a line-up comprising John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr, they sparked the "Beatlemania" phenomenon in 1963, gained international Directly prior to The Beatles' first American visit, Brian Epstein wanted someone to manage the escalating volume of merchandising requests that NEMS found itself unable to cope with, and asked his lawyer, David Jacobs, to oversee this task. Jacobs knew Nicky Byrne and asked him if he would be interested in taking over the merchandising subdivision from NEMS. Byrne accepted, and NEMS - communication, PR and account from NEMS altogether, paying NEMS a commission. Byrne accepted the offer subject to a 90% rate, leaving only 10% for the Beatles and NEMS combined. Completely unaware of the potential market that existed, particularly in America, Epstein agreed to the deal, and subsequently lost The Beatles an estimated $100,000,000 in possible income.

Beatlemania: Fans and media swarm the Beatles at Schiphol Airport, the Netherlands, June 1964.

The percentage difference in that the Beatles only got what looks to be 5% of revenue explains how they were a conduit for a beast flexing its muscle of control.

This kind of popularity explosion doesn't happen randomly.

This is the effort of a global community getting together to see just how popular they could make something. And what do you call that? Well.... How about A NEW FORCE OF NATURE?

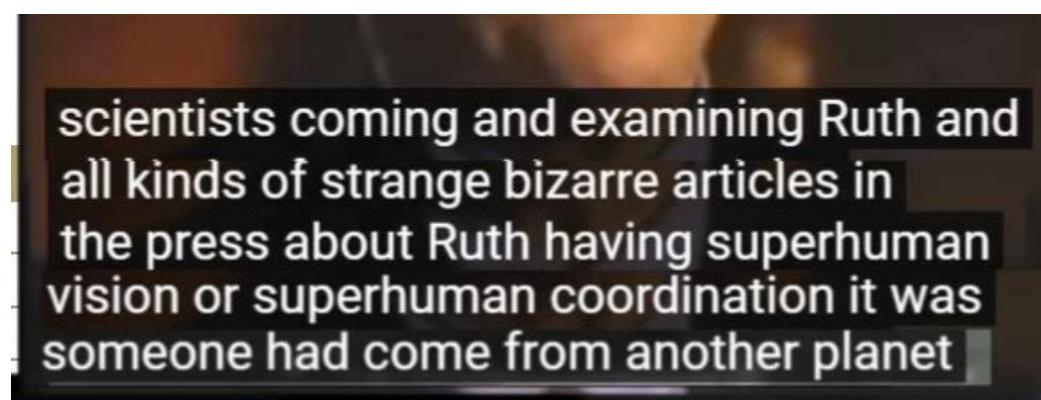

One of which they can re-create it using the same template. This is why the correlation for a new discovery of particles isn't happening with every big new band, it only represents the first time they tried to "create" a new force of nature. All the times after that they use the original comm to discuss it when necessary, and as such it builds out an entire coded language that is entirely nonsensical without decoding.

Speaking of which...

The Prototype Star

How are superstars created? This is another secret that comms that can clarify.

For example, Babe Ruth.

scientists coming and examining Ruth and all kinds of strange bizarre articles in the press about Ruth having superhuman vision or superhuman coordination it was someone had come from another planet

A man so good at playing baseball he was said to have superhuman vision and come from another planet. Those are meant to be taken as exaggerations but his larger-than-life persona is important to reconcile.

His feats hit a superhuman level in 1919 at the perfect time!

Why? The 1919 World Series scandal (which proved corruption to throw games at the highest level) had just hit and drove consumers away from games.

So which scenario is more likely? That Babe Ruth suddenly manifested superhuman playing skills at the exact right moment to save baseball or that they got fans back by creating a spectacle?

After the 1919 Black Sox scandal baseball saw some hard times.

Attendance dropped and the game's reputation was in the gutter.

However, the 1921 World Series saw a strong showing and averaged 2nd most attendance per game (1916 remained number 1 for average attendance) and due to the nine-game format would have the highest total attendance of any World Series.

This can be credited to Babe Ruth's rise in popularity and that the two teams were from the same city and played in the same ballpark.

Jane Leavy details in her new biography, The Big Fella, Ruth wasn't just the first baseball superstar. He was also a movie star, a vaudeville performer, a barnstormer, a pitcher for every conceivable product, and a nationally syndicated newspaper columnist. He was the first celebrity of the mass media era.

The grave in Section 25, Lot 1115, gets plenty of traffic. But the playoffs are always extra busy and, as The New York Times reported, a Yankees-Red Sox playoff series sends the visits to George Herman Ruth's grave into overdrive. And standing at Babe Ruth's grave apparently isn't enough — people feel compelled to leave not just bats, hats, balls and gloves but also a lot of alcohol and food.

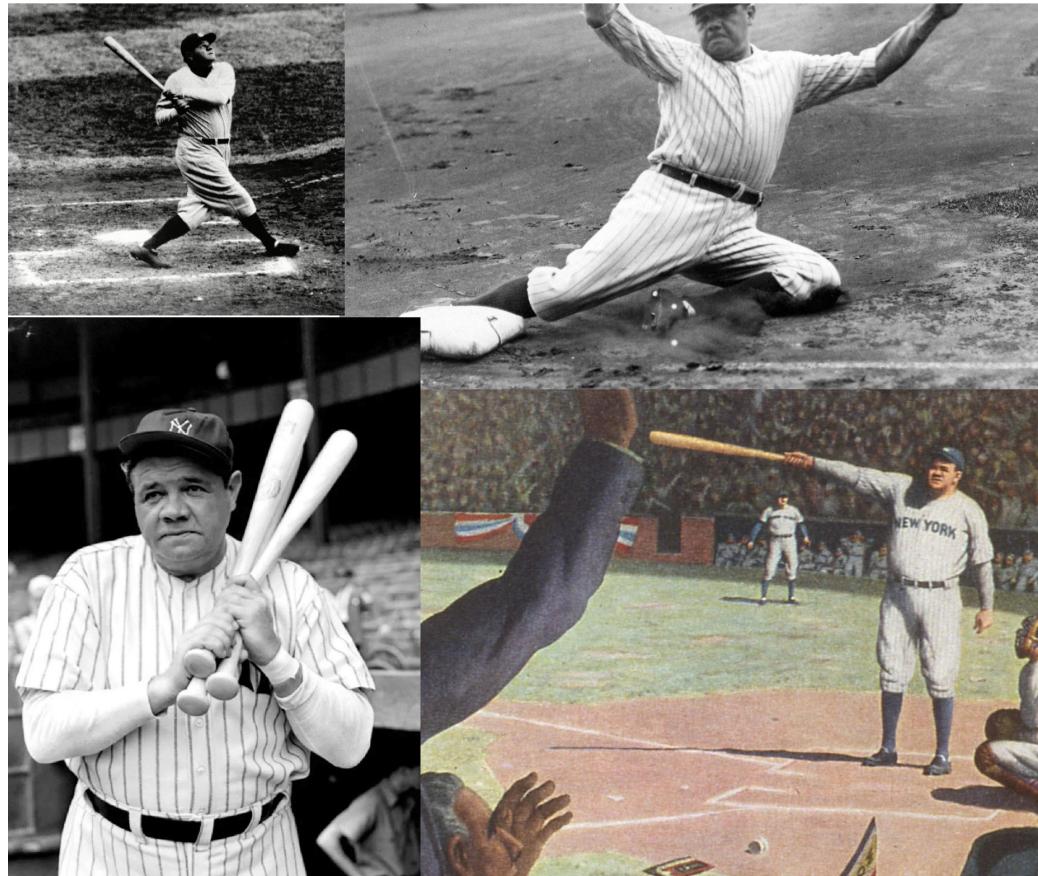

History speaks for itself. Babe Ruth single-handedly saved baseball and became the world's first superstar.

https://www.realclearhistory.com/articles/2020/03/12/how\_babe\_ruth\_saved\_baseball\_486543.html He is credited with rebounding baseball and much else.

Ushering in an era of Millionaire and in today's era even Billionaire sports players.

Which scenario is more likely? Superhero or carefully crafted narrative to save Baseball?

But obesity seems to have had little impact on players' skills. Babe Ruth, who was listed at 6'2" and 215 pounds but whose weight eventually swelled to more than 250 pounds, would have been considered obese throughout much of his career.

Before you answer notice how paradoxically he became better at baseball the worse shape he was in.

His body is more akin to a weightlifter as they can be fat and perform, but they could never play pro baseball.

That is unless there was a lot of cheating, in which case that type of body would be the ideal one as they would throw easy balls allowing home runs on demand.

This explains his famous “Called shot” that is often debated. When Babe Ruth had 2 strikes and then pointed to center field for his next home run.

Lou Gehrig confirmed Babe Ruth's famous 'called shot' in the ...

Unearthed radio sound from Yankees icon Lou Gehrig helps further one of baseball's most legendary tales: that Anyway... the point is Babe Ruth was a manufactured personality. The first celebrity endorsement, in that sense he shares a lot in common with the Beatles.

Who was the first celebrity endorsement?

In the 1930s the trend was toward athletes where the first celebrity and athlete to be paid to endorse a brand was Babe Ruth.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Celebrity\_branding ▾

Walsh used the Rod Tidwell rule for choosing endorsement opportunities for Ruth: Show me the money.<sup>19</sup> Babe hawked everything from underwear to annuities, and put the earning power of his baseball peers to shame while doing it. He earned $3000 for a print ad for Whizit coveralls. This was what the average major leaguer earned in an entire year in 1920, and was 30% of his base salary that year. He got $1302 for a similar type ad for Benrus watches. That is how much the average American earned in 1921.

His most lucrative deal was a three-year contract Walsh negotiated with Quaker Oats that netted Ruth $62,788, not to mention all the Puffed Wheat and oatmeal he cared to eat. That amount was about what the entire Yankees pitching staff took home in 1921.

Babe also sold underwear, earning $13,433 for lending his name to Babe Ruth's All America Athletic Underwear line. It was his longest lasting commercial relationship, covering 13 years, one year longer than the deal he had with Spalding Brothers. “There is Only One Babe Ruth,” crowded the tag line in one of his underwear ads. And apparently that was worth a lot to both Ruth and the proprietor of said undergarments. Ruth once negotiated a $1000 appearance fee for spending an hour with a pile of underwear in one of Chicago's leading department stores.<sup>20</sup>

Ruth was also a popular addition to vaudeville programs, earning $19,890 for his brief appearances telling corny jokes and performing kitschy songs. It took the average major leaguer more than three years to take home the amount that Ruth got for a few weeks of appearances.

Ruth earned $6,835 shilling his Ruth's Home Run candy bars for a nickel apiece, but not a cent from the sale of the Baby Ruth bar. You can still get a Baby Ruth (which was not named after President Grover Cleveland's daughter), but good luck finding a Ruth's Home Run bar. Curtiss Candy, shamelessly capitalizing on the popularity of Ruth, was selling one billion bars each year by 1925 when Ruth and Walsh began a fruitless six-year court battle to gain a bite of the sweet proceeds.<sup>21</sup>

A whole new era of marketing created a superhuman sports figure to sell merchandise.

The screenshot shows a news item from a website. At the top, there are tabs for "On This Day", "History", "Film & TV", and "Sport". Below the tabs, it says "MAR 1937" and lists "ALL", "EVENTS", "BIRTHDAYS", "DEATHS", and "WEDDINGS". A yellow star icon is next to the word "Sports History". The main text reads: "Mar 25 It is revealed Quaker Oats pays Babe Ruth $25,000 per year for ads". To the right is a small portrait of Babe Ruth. Below the text, a list item is highlighted with a yellow box: "In a news item that would spur nothing but yawns today, quite a sensation was stirred on March 25, 1937, when it was revealed that Quaker Oats was paying Babe Ruth $25,000 per year to appear in their ads."

Ruth, "still the most popular and famous athlete of his day" was the face of American baseball at the time.<sup>[1]</sup>

500,000 Japanese filled the streets of Tokyo to welcome Ruth and 14 other all-star baseball players for the barnstorming tour. The Americans played 18 games against the All-Nippon team, featuring many of Japan's top players, in front of tens of thousands of fans.<sup>[3]</sup> The games were played in Meiji-Jingu Stadium in Tokyo, Koshien Stadium in Kobe, Yagiyama Baseball Field in Sendai and others throughout the country. The Americans won all eighteen games.<sup>[2]</sup> Ruth would hit 13 home runs during the tour.<sup>[4]</sup>

Note the Muon particle was PREDICTED by a Japanese Physicist the year after Babe Ruth became a phenomenon in Japan. Ushering in their biggest national sport. The only country outside of the USA to have Baseball as the top sport at any point in history.

However, the comm is also tied to consumer spending and this is probably why...

Harry Dexter White (October 29, 1892 – August 16, 1948) was a senior U.S. Treasury department official. Working closely with the Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., he helped set American financial policy toward the Allies of World War II. He was later accused of espionage by passing information to the Soviet Union.<sup>[1]</sup>

He was a senior American official at the 1944 Bretton Woods conference that established the postwar economic order. He dominated the conference, and his vision of post-war financial institutions mostly prevailed over those of John Maynard Keynes, the British representative who was the other main founder. Through Bretton Woods, White was a major architect of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank.<sup>[2]</sup>

White was accused in 1948 of spying for the Soviet Union, which he adamantly denied. He was never a Communist party member, but he had frequent contacts with Soviet officials as part of his duties at the Treasury. Revelations about those contacts and about dubious activities of a few of his friends and colleagues, including through decoded and now declassified Soviet cables intercepted in the Venona Project,<sup>[3]</sup> added to the suspicions surrounding him.

- 08/16/1948 Babe Ruth Death
- 08/16/1948 Harry Dexter White Death: Architect of Bretton Woods

When we go into the day he "died"

Note it was tied to an inflation spending bill. The “death” in this case symbolizes the fall of consumer spending post WW2. This fits the bill which was specifically tied to consumer spending post WW2 which went from record levels in 1946 to recession level 1948. The exact same timeframe Babe Ruth battled Cancer.

Cancer here is the lack of consumer spending, the lack of the US populace to spend on nonnecessities. The death of baseball symbolizes this as it represents the nonnecessity perfectly. More than any other activity of the time. I mean really... do you go without baseball games or food?

So his “death” as well as Bretton Woods architect was used as a tool to discuss the old dead era where people would spend versus the new one which had the government’s full attention with a major spending bill that day.

Celebrity deaths are not always faked, but the more famous the person the more likely it is, obvious exceptions dealing with people who are executed by the deranged.

Stardom End: Supernova

All major subjects have comms lingering at the top, but some subjects are given far more media space.

Compare Hollywood & Astronomy: Define “Star” in both contexts.

Hollywood is far more prevalent in our lives than Astronomy.

Our lives are eternally bombarded with celebrity news. Go to any website, turn on any radio station, look two feet outside your place of work and you may see a billboard with a star on it.

Why does this matter? Comms are symbolic and a symbol like "Star" is transparent. This is to say that highly publicized "Star" news in astronomy is sometimes about Hollywood.

Take for example a SUPERNOVA. What is that?

A Supernova is the DESTRUCTION OF A STAR.

Astronomers have identified the star that may be responsible for a supernova discovered by skywatchers last week, SPACE.com has learned.

The supernova popped up in the galaxy M95 about 33 million light-years from Earth. It was first reported last week by a several different observers and soon confirmed by major observatories.

So... they detected the destruction of a star on March 16th 2012. Was there any famous Stars that were destroyed that day?

Why yes, in fact, it's one of the most infamous examples. Ever heard of the Kony guy?

As these kinds of articles can give comms aware people more details on why in the heck this unexpected event happened.

They exist to give a way to describe the destruction of a star in scientific terms. To give people who wonder why on earth is he doing this context Likely in this case his cause of demonizing a child sex operation by a foreign warlord did not sit kindly with the strings above that warlord. Strings were pulled and the smaller strings above the Kony guy were forced into action of self-destruction lest they become the targets of the biggest fish.

There are quite a few stars that have destroyed themselves, but that's not the only way for this kind of comm to apply.

Under the terms of the Kingdome lease, local investors had 120 days to come up with a purchaser to keep the team in Seattle. Senator Gorton, in his capacity as a member of the Senate Commerce Committee, had worked to assist Nintendo, a Japanese-owned company with U.S. headquarters in Redmond, Washington, to curtail counterfeiting of their video games. Early in December 1991, he called Howard Lincoln, senior vice president of Nintendo's American division, to ask for a meeting to talk about an investment.

On December 23, 1991, Gorton received a call from Lincoln and Minoru Arakawa, head of Nintendo's American division and Yamauchi's son-in-law. Nintendo was very grateful to the United States and to the State of Washington for its successes there. If Seattle needed $100 million to keep baseball in town, Yamauchi would contribute it out of his own pocket.<sup>22</sup>

That was just me looking at the few supernovas I could find documented and recognizing major famous people ending careers in one way or another at the same time. Obviously, there are many powerful people who ended without a Supernova, but the difference is the marker suggests these are being forced by their own hand.

The Kony guy being forced to go and strip and humiliate himself in public for example... or Steve Jobs suddenly saying he quits. These were people who spent their entire lives working towards a goal and then having to run away from it at a moment's notice. That's what I suspect is the point of a supernova. A way to explain this sudden collapse to comms-aware people. The motive for collapsing was to avoid their blackmail from going public. This is why a supernova leads to a black hole that sucks up all light!

Next up let's do an exercise.

I've underlined a few parts of note.

The story begins with a Stepmother trying to convince her husband to kill his children Hansel and Gretel.

HANSEL AND GRETEL

Hard by a great forest dwelt a poor wood-cutter with his wife and his two children. The boy was called Hansel and the girl Gretel. He had little to bite and to break, and once when great dearth fell on the land, he could no longer procure even daily bread. Now when he thought over this by night in his bed, and tossed about in his anxiety, he groaned and said to his wife: 'What is to become of us? How are we to feed our poor children, when we no longer have anything even for ourselves?' 'I'll tell you what, husband,' answered the woman, 'early tomorrow morning we will take the children out into the forest to where it is the thickest; there we will light a fire for them, and give each of them one more piece of bread, and then we will go to our work and leave them alone. They will not find the way home again, and we shall be rid of them.' 'No, wife,' said the man, 'I will not do that; how can I bear to leave my children alone in the forest?—the wild animals would soon come and tear them to pieces. 'O, you fool!' said she, 'then we must all four die of hunger, you may as well plane the planks for our coffins, and she left him no peace until he consented.' But I feel very sorry for the poor children, all the same,' said the man.

The two children had also not been able to sleep for hunger, and had heard what their stepmother had said to their father. Gretel wept bitter tears, and said to Hansel: 'Now all is over with us.' 'Be quiet, Gretel,' said Hansel, 'do not distress yourself, I will soon find a way to help us.' And when the old folks had fallen asleep, he got up, put on his little coat, opened the door below, and crept outside. The moon shone brightly, and the white pebbles which lay in front of the house glittered like real silver pennies. Hansel stooped and stuffed the little pocket of his coat with as many as he could get in. Then he it and saw that it was Hansel and Gretel, she said: 'You naughty children, why have you slept so long in the forest?—we thought you were never coming back at all!' The father, however, rejoiced, for it had cut him to the heart to leave them behind alone.

Not long afterwards, there was once more great dearth throughout the land, and the children heard their mother saying at night to their father: 'Everything is eaten again, we have one half loaf left, and that is the end. The children must go, we will take them farther into the wood, so that they will not find their way out again; there is no other means of saving ourselves!' The man's heart was heavy, and he thought: 'It would be better for you to share the last mouthful with your children.' The woman, however, would listen to nothing that he had to say, but scolded and reproached him. He who says A must say B, likewise, and as he had yielded the first time, he had to do so a second time also.

The children, however, were still awake and had heard the conversation. When the old folks were asleep, Hansel again got up, and wanted to go out and pick up pebbles as he had done before, but the woman had locked the door, and Hansel could not get out. Nevertheless he comforted his little sister, and said: 'Do not cry, Gretel, go to sleep quietly, the good God will help us.'

Hansel uses a breadcrumb trail to survive and make it back to the house in the woods.

The kids outsmart her, but this leads the Stepmother to lock Hansel up and strand the kids again but with no bread.

There are two phases to the story and that was the first phase. You need to keep that in mind to understand the second phase. Context is everything. Remember that last time they were stranded in the forest they went straight back to their father's house.

sister, and said: 'Do not cry, Gretel, go to sleep quietly, the good God will help us.'

It was now three mornings since they had left their father's house. They began to walk again, but they always came deeper into the forest, and if help did not come soon, they must die of hunger and weariness. When it was mid-day, they saw a beautiful snow-white bird sitting on a bough, which sang so delightfully that they stood still and listened to it. And when its song was over, it spread its wings and flew away before them, and they followed it until they reached a little house, on the roof of which it alighted; and when they approached the little house they saw that it was built of bread and covered with cakes, but that the windows were of clear sugar. 'We will set to work on that,' said Hansel, 'and have a good meal. I will eat a bit of the roof, and you Gretel, can eat some of the window, it will taste sweet.' Hansel reached up above, and broke off a little of the roof to try how it tasted, and Gretel leant against the window and nibbled at the panes. Then a soft voice cried from the parlour:

'Nibble, nibble, gnaw,
Who is nibbling at my little house?'

however, nodded her head, and said: 'Oh, you dear children, who has brought you here? do come in, and stay with me. No harm shall happen to you.' She took them both by the hand, and led them into her little house. Then good food was set before them, milk and pancakes, with sugar, apples, and nuts. Afterwards two pretty little beds were covered with clean white linen, and Hansel and Gretel lay down in them, and thought they were in heaven.

The old woman had only pretended to be kind; she was in reality a wicked witch, who lay in wait for children, and had only built the little house are aware when human beings draw near. When Hansel and Gretel came into her neighbourhood, she laughed with malice, and said mockingly: 'I have them, they shall not escape me again!' Early in the morning before the children were awake, she was already up, and when she saw both of them sleeping and looking so pretty, with their plump and rosy cheeks she muttered to herself: 'That will be a dainty mouthful!' Then she seized Hansel with her shrivelled hand, carried him into a little stable, and locked him in behind a grated door. Scream as he might, it would not help him. Then she went to Early in the morning, Gretel had to go out and hang up the cauldron with the water, and light the fire. 'We will bake first,' said the old woman. 'I have already heated the oven, and kneaded the dough.' She pushed poor Gretel out to the oven, from which flames of fire were already darting. 'Creep in,' said the witch, 'and see if it is properly heated, so that we can put the bread in.' And once Gretel was inside, she intended to shut the oven and let her bake in it, and then she would eat her, too. But Gretel saw what she had in mind, and said: 'I do not know how I am to do it; how do I get in?' 'Silly goose,' said the old woman. 'The door is big enough; just look, I can get in myself!' and she crept up and thrust her head into the oven. Then Gretel gave her a push that drove her far into it, and shut the iron door, and fastened the bolt. Oh! then she began to howl quite horribly, but Gretel ran away and the godless witch was miserably burnt to death.

Gretel, however, ran like lightning to Hansel, opened his little stable, and cried: 'Hansel, we are saved! The old witch is dead!' Then Hansel sprang like a bird from its cage when the door is opened. How they did rejoice and embrace each other, and dance about and kiss each other! And as they had no longer any need to fear her, they went into the witch's house, and in every corner there stood chests full of pearls and jewels. 'These are far better than 'pebbles!' said Hansel, and thrust into his pockets whatever could be got in, and Gretel said: 'I, too, will take something home with me,' and filled her pinafore full. 'But now we must be off,' said Hansel, 'that we may get out of the witch's forest.'

When they had walked for two hours, they came to a great stretch of water. 'We cannot cross,' said Hansel, 'I see no foot-plank, and no bridge.' 'And there is also no ferry,' answered Gretel, 'but a white duck is swimming there: if I ask her, she will help us over.' Then she cried:

'Little duck, little duck, dost thou see,
Hansel and Gretel are waiting for thee?
There's never a plank, or bridge in sight,
Take us across on thy back so white.'

The duck came to them, and Hansel seated himself on its back, and told

The duck came to them, and Hansel seated himself on its back, and told his sister to sit by him. 'No,' replied Gretel, 'that will be too heavy for the little duck; she shall take us across, one after the other.' The good little duck did so, and when they were once safely across and had walked for a short time, the forest seemed to be more and more familiar to them, and at length they saw from afar their father's house. Then they began to run, rushed into the parlour, and threw themselves round their father's neck. The man had not known one happy hour since he had left the children in the forest; the woman, however, was dead. Gretel emptied her pinafore until pearls and precious stones ran about the room, and Hansel threw one handful after another out of his pocket to add to them. Then all anxiety was at an end, and they lived together in perfect happiness. My tale is done, there runs a mouse; whosoever catches it, may make himself a big fur cap out of it.

The kids then take turns riding a Duck back to the father's house.

They learn the Stepmother had died while they were away and so they all live happily ever after with the treasures of the bread house.

The story ends with a small line about the tale being done and that there will be no more anxiety, and that if anyone catches a mouse they may make a big fur cap out of it.

Did you understand the connection between the two phases of the story?

I'll lay it out.

How did the Stepmother die? Why was it brushed away at the end of the story like a side note?

The trick to this story is this:

It's all one story!

The story can be read literally until they get to the house made out of bread with the witch. At that point, it switches into a symbolic retelling of events as a way to duck the consequences of homicide.

Pay close attention to the major plot elements of both phases of the story.

1. Starving family has too many people.
2. Kids overhear Stepmother's plan to kill them to save food.
3. Stepmother feigns kindness and gives Hansel food as bait only to strand them in forest.
4. Kids outsmart Stepmother and return to the cabin in the woods.
5. Stepmother locks Hansel inside and again plots to kill the children the same way.

Phase 2

1. Kids get lost in the forest and instead of returning home, they find a wicked Witch with a bread house.

2. Hansel is given food by the Witch as a trap and is locked inside.
3. The witch feigns kindness and uses food as bait to lure them into a trap.
4. Kids kill the witch and loot the house
5. Kids Ride a duck one at a time home
6. Kids return to father and live happily ever after.

The mother mysteriously dies when they kill the witch. It makes no sense in the context of the story except if you reconcile the fact the story was about the Stepmother all along.

Stepmother = Witch

Evil Stepmother wants to kill stepkids for eating them out of the house and home. (They say that in literal terms early in the story and it's reflected in the eating of the house a witch lives in)

Visit

Kids recognize they are going to be killed and instead kill her.

The stories have a ton of parallels.

Hansel gets locked in by both the Witch and the Stepmother. Hansel gets bread from the mother and both times as tricks to kill him.

The first thing they do after killing the “witch” is riding a “duck” as in avoid consequences (ducking). At the very end they say if anyone sees a rat they will kill it. I.e. if anyone “rats” they’ll go after them next.

The story when we simply converge the mother and witch character fits like a puzzle piece in such a way that I have no doubt it’s the correct solution. You don’t realize the two characters die at the same time because it rushes past that point in the story.

The driving force for the first 1/4 of the story is the mother and then it abruptly switches to a witch and the kids never mention the Stepmother again. Then at the end they return home and we get this tiny sentence about how the Stepmother died and so everything is ok now.

At the end they get “food” but remember the point there is the mother wanted to kill the kids for more food for herself. Just like how the kids getting a tiny bit of bread = gingerbread house eating. Therefore killing her = more food/Money. After all, they needed less mouths to feed and an adult mouth costs/feeds a lot more than a child! By killing her they fixed the problem of food/money in the exact same way the mother wanted to.

They can’t say they killed their Stepmother, but they can tell the story of an evil witch and the fight that began because they ate part of a house.

Now that you understand the symbols, we can talk about iterations.

According to Wikipedia the most popular version of Hansel and Gretel was a famous opera in 1893... know what else happened then?

It just so happened to begin around the same time a famous young girl killed her step-mother!

“Hansel and Gretel” is a tale of Aarne–Thompson–Uther type 327A.<sup>[4][5]</sup> It also includes an episode of type 1121 ('Burning the Witch in Her Own Oven').<sup>[2][6]</sup> The story is set in medieval Germany. ## What Made Lizzie Borden Kill? | AMERICAN HERITAGE

All this evidence seemed to point to Lizzie, but the only motive anyone could come up with was simple greed: upon the deaths of her father and stepmother, Lizzie and Emma would come into a sizable inheritance. At the end of the inquest, Lizzie was arrested and charged with the crimes.

A prominent point of discussion in the trial (or press coverage of it) was the hatchet-head found in the basement, which was not convincingly demonstrated by the prosecution to be the murder weapon. Prosecutors argued that the killer had removed the handle because it would have been covered in blood.<sup>[58]</sup> One officer testified that a hatchet handle was found near the hatchet-head, but another officer contradicted this.<sup>[59]</sup> Though no bloody clothing was found at the scene, Russell testified that on August 8, 1892, she had witnessed Borden burn a dress in the kitchen stove, saying it had been ruined when she brushed against wet paint.<sup>[60]</sup> During the course of the trial, defense never attempted to challenge this statement.<sup>[61]</sup>

Lizzie Borden during the trial, by Benjamin West Clineinst

Lizzie speaks in a detached manner and when Fleet calls Abby her mother, Lizzie insists, "She is not my mother—she is my step-mother."

Note how she burned her dress in the kitchen stove, and likely did it likely for inheritance. Likely the media frenzy was coordinated with this play as a guide.

Why Napoleon's Invasion of Russia Was the Beginning of the End

The French emperor—intent on conquering Europe—sent 600,000 troops into Russia. Six disastrous months later, only an estimated 100,000 made it out.

After taking power in 1799, French leader Napoleon Bonaparte won a string of military victories that gave him control over most of Europe. He annexed present-day Belgium and Holland, along with large chunks of present-day Italy, Croatia and Germany, and he set up dependencies in Switzerland, Poland and various German states. Spain was largely under his hegemony despite continuing guerilla warfare there, and Austria, Prussia and Russia had been browbeaten into becoming allies. Only Great Britain remained completely outside of his grasp.

As Napoleon realized the full extent of the disaster in Russia, his vulnerability was exposed to the world, leading his reluctant allies, e.g. Prussia and the Confederation of the Rhine, to quickly abandon him. In December 1812 Napoleon sensed trouble. He left his army in Russia, as he had previously abandoned his army in Egypt, to rush back to Paris, where the conspiracy led by the half-mad General Malet, which threatened to overthrow Napoleon, had spread the news of his death in Russia. In the early months of 1812, Prussia broke from its alliance with Napoleon and joined Russia against him; northern Germany rose against Napoleonic rule; Sweden, ruled by Marshal Bernadotte, reinforced the coalition; Austria broke the French alliance but remained neutral until August; and the French finally evacuated Madrid. All Europe was now united against Napoleon. The final Grand Alliance was completed in August 1813 when Austria abandoned its neutrality to take part in driving Napoleon's forces from Germany. The 'Battle of the Nations' at Leipzig on 16-19 October 1813 led to

He went from defeating every other country together to a humiliating string of losses. He was forced to abandon his campaign in Russia and rush back to Paris as allies began turning against him.

I've decoded Little Red Riding Hood in a number of posts as tied to threats. Threats of making someone into the next "Big Bad Wolf" with a little girl making an accusation.

Check some of my many other posts for more on that, especially on how Disney began by making markers for blackmail ops.

Who was using blackmail back in the early days of Disney? Officially that'd be the KGB. And who led the KGB? That'd be a man named FELIX Dzerzhinsky.

In July 1934, two months after Menzhinsky's death, the OGPU was dissolved and reincorporated into the People's Commissariat for Internal Affairs (NKVD), the newly created interior ministry of the Soviet Union, becoming its Main Directorate of State Security (GUGB) under the leadership of Yagoda. The OGPU would later be transformed into the more widely known Committee for State Security (KGB) in 1954.

Julius. He first appeared in the very first animated series created by Walt Disney, the Alice Comedies, making him the predecessor of Oswald the Lucky Rabbit and Mickey Mouse. Julius is an anthropomorphic cat, appearing intentionally similar to Felix the Cat. A bold and inventive hero, he gradually became the primary focus of the Alice Comedies, to the point Disney abandoned live action for pure animation on subsequent projects.

Julius was the first of Disney's animated protagonists to battle Pete, their oldest continuing character.

The two "Julius Katz" stories on Buena Vista Street in Disney California Adventure are named in his honor.

Circling back, the point as it relates to Grimm's fairy tales is those stories had their debut tied to Napoleon's fall.

The Russians eventually offered battle outside Moscow on 7 September: the Battle of Borodino resulted in approximately 44,000 Russian and 35,000 French dead, wounded or captured, and may have been the bloodiest day of battle in history up to that point in time<sup>[195]</sup> Although the French had won, the Russian army had accepted, and withstood, the major battle Napoleon had hoped would be decisive. Napoleon's own account was: "The most terrible of all my battles was the one before Moscow. The French showed themselves to be worthy of victory, but the Russians showed themselves worthy of being invincible".<sup>[196]</sup> present-day Belgium and Holland, along with large chunks of present-day Italy, Croatia and Germany, and he set up dependencies in Switzerland, Poland and various German states. Spain was largely under his hegemony despite continuing guerrilla warfare there, and Austria, Prussia and Russia had been beaten into becoming allies. Only Great Britain remained completely outside of his grasp.

As Napoleon realized the full extent of the disaster in Russia, his vulnerability was exposed to the world, leading his reluctant allies, e.g. Prussia and the Confederation of the Rhine, to quickly abandon him. In December 1812 Napoleon sensed trouble. He left his army in Russia, as he had previously abandoned his army in Egypt, to rush back to Paris, where the conspiracy led by the half-mad General Malet, which threatened to overthrow Napoleon, had spread the news of his death in Russia. In the early months of 1813, Prussia broke from its alliance with Napoleon and joined Russia against him; notably, Prussia, the Netherlands, Sweden, and by Marshal Bernadotte, the King of Sweden, Austria broke the French alliance but remained neutral until 1813, and the French finally evacuated Madrid. All Europe was now united against Napoleon. The final Grand Alliance was completed in August 1813 when Austria abandoned its neutrality to take part in driving Napoleon's forces from Germany. Although he showed all his old expertise and daring in the campaigns of Germany in 1813 and France in 1814, even by his marshals and French legislators that Napoleon's cause was lost. The 'Battle of the Nations' at Leipzig on 16-19 October 1813 led to want him.

It would only get worse. The new British governor of the island, Hudson Lowe, was determined that Napoleon would not escape from this exile as he had done from his first one in Elba, and so restricted his movement, monitoring his correspondence, and ordering that Napoleon be seen in the flesh by British officers several times a day.

Shortly after Napoleon died, an autopsy was carried out by his physician Francesco Antommarchi. During this procedure, his heart and intestines were removed and put into sealed vessels, a standard treatment for the bodies of monarchs. However, Antommarchi also cut off Napoleon's penis – no one knows why.

It was then smuggled out of the island by his chaplain and would end up being bought and sold over the years by various parties, eventually ending up on display in 1927 at New York City's Museum of French Art, where TIME magazine compared it to a "maltreated strip of buckskin shoelace." An inglorious end for one who had in a matter of years managed to conquer almost all of Europe.

The bloodiest battle in history hence GRIMM's Fairy Tales. The way they achieved their victory against Napoleon is all in the book. LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD and others. This is why his allies suddenly turned against him. These stories were the markers for ops and even to this day they have continued.

Albeit there are other uses for children's stories... let's go into one.

For the last decode let's go into social engineering.

Social Engineering

Let me demonstrate the way comms relate to trends. How they twist the world into shapes that would never occur naturally.

For example.... did you ever find it odd that there is a community of adult men that like My Little Pony?

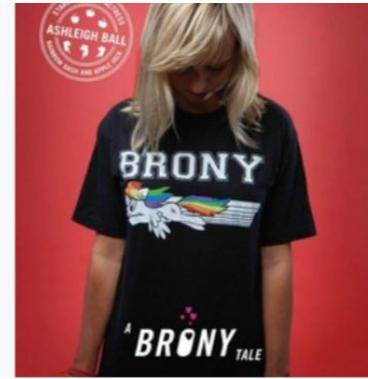

I'm not the kind of person to judge unique tastes as I have plenty of oddities myself, but that's the thing, it's not an oddity when it grows to such a size. How did that come about?

A Brony Tale (originally titled Brony) is a 2014 Canadian-American documentary film directed by Brent Hodge. The film explores the brony phenomenon, the adult fan base of the children's animated show My Little Pony: Friendship is Magic.

animated show My Little Pony: Friendship Is Magic that arose shortly after its premiere in 2010. The film is structured around the journey of Ashleigh Ball, one of the principal voice actresses for the show, including her initial reactions to learning of this older fanbase, and her travel as a Guest of Honor to one of the first fan conventions BronyCon held in New York City in 2012. Hodge, a close friend of and previous collaborator with Ball, was curious as she was as to this phenomenon and opted to film her travel and appearance at the convention for the documentary.

The answer becomes clear with a bit of decoding.

Officially they didn't expect this sudden interest from legions of adult men.

My Little Pony: Friendship Is Magic first aired on the Hub on October 10, 2010, as part of Hasbro's intent to promote the fledgling network and market its new line of My Little Pony toys.<sup>[5]</sup> Though a critical success with the target demographic of young girls and their parents,<sup>[6][7]</sup> it attracted an unexpected audience of teenage and adult fans, primarily male, originating from the 4chan imageboard. The fandom adopted the term "brony", a portmanteau of "bro" and "pony", and became a highly participatory culture representing New Sincerity, creating artwork, fan fiction, music, mashup videos, and other media.<sup>[8][9]</sup> The show's creators, including executive producers Lauren Faust, Jayson Thiessen, Christophe Toverski, the writers and voice actors, Hasbro and the Hub have sought to embrace the brony community, communicating openly with the

No, they did expect it, and it became popular through coordinated promotion to men. Comms make this clear.

I know this because the very same day the debut of MLP aired they had a very special episode of the Simpsons.

The day MLP had its debut there was a special episode of the Simpsons. They made the unusual choice to having the famous graffiti artist named BANKSY doing the intro. Note the name choice MONEYBART, as that'll be relevant shortly.

The same day it launched the Simpsons had a very special episode where a little girl coaches older boys on how to play sports. Think about that in relation to MLP: Older Boys learn to emulate/follow a young girl.

By itself, none of that is terribly convincing... I mean how do I know the Simpsons were specifically sending comms about MLP? MLP is about a magical unicorn. It's not like Banksy used a unicorn...

Wait... it had exactly that.

So that clues us in that these comms go together, and the episode itself really gives it away. The artist Banksy is particularly telling as they hired a famous artist known for graffiti to make an intro and he decides to involve Unicorns.

Banksy == Bank See. Just like the title "MoneyBart" as in this is asserting that money is available today if you follow the ops.

What ops?

Note Milhouse specifically says "She's everything I WANT TO BE"

The episode begins with a woman being admired and FOLLOWED specifically by the unpopular boys.

The other boys lust after her and then eavesdrop. Rather than get angry the girls welcome the boys to join.

These are comms for the “surprise” of men being interested in MLP and then being welcomed.

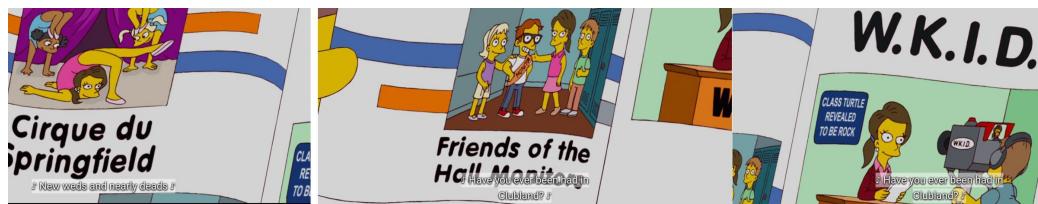

Lisa just started the school’s RECYCLING society. As in taking boys and repurposing them.

She is asked to solve for “X” which is a comm for “CROSS” as in bringing two different worlds together. In this case, symbolizes bringing adult men into a little girl fandom.

Lisa desires to move up in society and is given a road. Note specifically the sequence of images in the yearbook.

1. Cupid arrow carefully aimed
2. Cupid arrow hits an ADULT homely MAN.
3. BENDING OVER BACKWARDS
4. To do what?
5. BENDING OVER BACKWARDS to become friends with the most unpopular boys.
6. This leads to what?
7. MEDIA PROMOTION Success!

Doesn't get much clearer in symbolism than that sequence.

Girl fires CUPIDS ARROW AT ADULT MAN. I.e. making a man fall in love with MLP.

To bend over backward and become friends with the ostracized fringes. End reward is becoming a STAR.

It's giving instructions for cells around the world that if they want to get promoted by algo's online they can promote MLP for adult men.

This is what is being offered in exchange for that! Hence BANKSY + Episode named MONEYBART timed to Debut.

The point was to psychologically mold grown men and little boys into what?

To weaken a nation... what better way than making large section of the youth (and adults) imitative and obsess over being a little girl?

4chan was the primary source of the initial migration, a place tailored to shepherding porn-obsessed men online. “Recycling”.

I’m not actually saying the show is bad for adult men to watch, my issue is with the deception.

The show itself has comms tied to this “community outreach” like the Spike character. A boy dragon who is older than the girls but follows them around and looks and acts like a baby. Originally designed to have a GRUFF and MALE voice but then given a girlish voice.

Lauren Faust said in an interview that she had to fight for Cathy Weseluck to be the voice of Spike, because Hasbro originally wanted him to sound rather gruff and scratchy, similar to Charlie Adler’s interpretation of the character in the G1 movies and TV series.<sup>[9]</sup>

Spike’s crush on Rarity was not planned out from the beginning. When Lauren Faust was writing Rarity’s

People need to learn what is going on in the world lest they get suckered into endless manipulations found everywhere.

This post was built as an introduction so I avoided complex comms. Some comms have extra layers of obfuscation to them by using symbols that aren’t as obvious as most in this post. For example the most common comm I go over is water = information.

This is because information that is true “holds water”. New information that is big “makes waves”. There are a ton of other reasons too but at a glance the idea of water = information sounds illogical. It's not a conclusion I would have come to if not for the countless patterns I go over in posts. Like this one

<https://decodingsymbols.wordpress.com/2022/10/30/coffee-water/>

it's a good one to move onto after this introduction as there is no comm you will see more frequently here than "Water" and so it's best to get that symbol in your head ASAP. It's only one of many comms I go over but some are used far more frequently than others.

Now that you understand the methodology you can begin to build out your comprehension of symbols. The ones in this post were carefully chosen to demonstrate a variety of basic subjects.

We have a long way to go, but hopefully, this post has helped you understand just how in control we all are. From the top to the bottom our whole lives are pulled by strings we can't perceive. A secret discussion is had from our birth to death on which way we should be pulled. Many of these people aren't bad but are just caught up in a screwed-up system. Many are trying to change it and that's the only reason posts like mine are even allowed now.

I've been working hard to improve the message and I hope this has helped you. I have well over one hundred and fifty posts and more than a hundred of them are just as long as this one. Many of the comms in this post were pulled from them as I intended this to be an introduction. Tho there were a few new finds here and there.

I could have made it 10X longer but these posts have a limit length I hit. I say this because if you found what I've shown compelling, understand this is barely the tip of the iceberg. Every week for years now I've uncovered comms and presented them.

I try and present in as many ways as possible the system as I've decoded it. The basic concepts, like how and why fake news happens.

- 1. Gov Cell With Q
  - Data Access Updates Large Cell Of Situation
- 2. Large Cell Instructs & Funds Small Cell
- 3. Small Cell Produces Event Embedded With Large Cell Messages
- 4. MSM Reports Event to spread
- 5. Global Cells Without Q Access Receive Updates

 ACCESS RECEIVE UPDATES
Deals, Warnings, Etc.

6. Process Repeats Daily Becomes "The News" And Over Time "History"

There are many reasons for it but the one above is basic logic for why it exists in this precise form. It's a way for the truth to be in plain sight and yet most people can't perceive it at all. With comms awareness the entire world changes in countless ways, possibilities open up!

The posts get more and more convincing as you continue, many times I read a comm I decoded and then go back and realize I missed 20 more just because I only read the headline or I didn't understand the connection it had with some other subject. Suffice to say it's real and anyone with an eye for patterns can understand why.

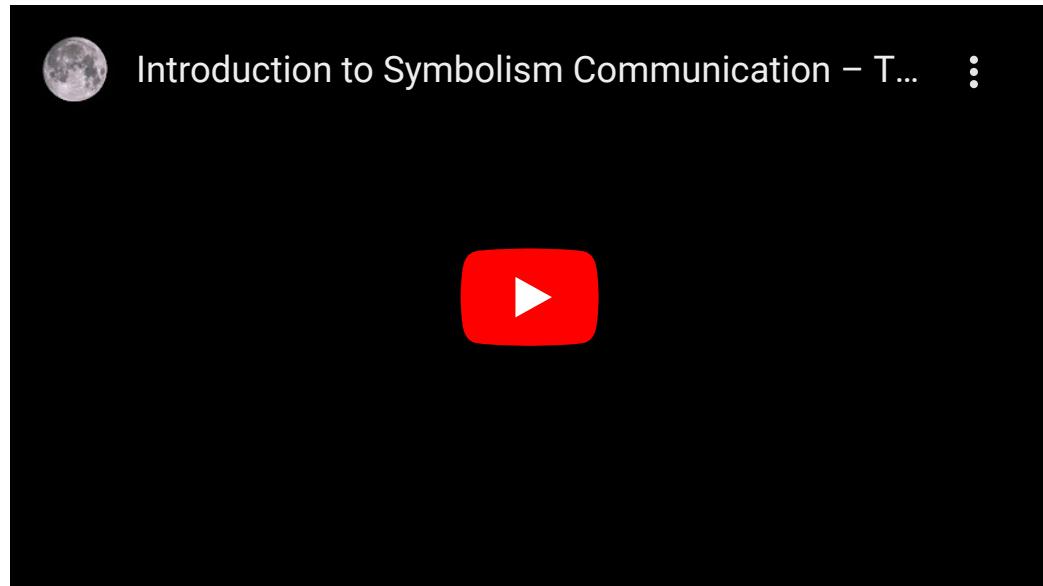

If you want to help and share this post you have options!

You can link them directly to the blog page or you can help by going to one of the many places I post weekly and help with a retweet.

That last link is a hub I started and many people begin decoding there as a community! You use the word "Request" and have a specific subject you wish to decode I will reply to each one (usually the day of or after a new post) and in many cases I will actually decode the subject requested! In fact almost all posts begin with a request from one of the above links!

You can also link them this YouTube Video which is the same post you just read but in video form with all dialogue computer read and all images appearing alongside the dialogue at the right moment! It's an amazing achievement in automation so give it a look and like regardless!

For some people this version will be much more digestible so pick the one most suitable for the audience you have in mind!
